

They'll Do It Every Time By Jimmy Hatlo

'What Time Is It?' Might Get You a Punch in Nose in Des Moines Next Week

Des Moines, Iowa — (U.P.)—Des Moines residents wondered today how they will ever find out what time it is this summer.

They may end up going to work on standard time, parking their cars on daylight time, and then reverting to standard time for an evening at their favorite bistro.

All this may happen next Monday. It's not quite final, which isn't surprising since City Council already has made three decisions on the matter—all of them different.

The unlikely mixup started two weeks ago when the council, after several weeks of hearings, gave final approval to an ordinance putting the city on Daylight Saving Time as of May 20.

The reaction to the council's move was virtually unanimous—against the idea.

Farm organizations squawked loudly, radio and television stations said it was impossible, and businessmen said they could not go along with daylight time. The state of Iowa officially voted that daylight time would not apply to state offices in Des Moines.

After what Mayor Ray Mills termed vociferous "non-cooperation," the council announced last Thursday that it had agreed informally to drop Daylight Saving Time for this year. But it said it would leave the ordinance on the books for 1957.

After this announcement, everything settled down and most people forgot about the controversy.

But on Monday the council met again for the simple chore of formally acting on their informal solution. There was not exactly a meeting of the minds.

Switches Signals

One councilman switched signals and said he couldn't vote for an amendment which would drop Daylight Saving Time for this year but put it into effect next year. It was the crucial vote and the amendment was defeated.

Then the minority block of the council proposed that the whole daylight time ordinance be rescinded. The majority refused to accept the proposal and, when the councilmen got up to leave, the issue was right back where it started—snafued.

Now, unless something new happens, the city and its 1,300 employees will go on daylight time next Monday. Practically the entire remainder of the city will stay on standard time.

Woman Gives Birth To Child in Field

Camby, Ind. — (U.P.) — Mrs. Margaret Morris, 27, was waiting in a field for her husband to finish plowing Wednesday, when she realized she was about to give birth to a child.

Mrs. Morris sent a niece to tell her husband what was happening. When Morris arrived, Mrs. Morris was holding a baby in her arms. All are doing fine.

'Scatter-Shots' By Anti-Aircraft Rocket Will Be Developed

White Sands Proving Ground, N.M. — (U.P.) — The Army's Nike B anti-aircraft rocket will be able to carry an atomic warhead that would permit "scatter shots" against formations of enemy aircraft, a spokesman told United Press Wednesday.

A small, controlled atomic device in Nike's nose would be the key to the high destructive potential of the rocket, the spokesman said. He asked that his name not be used.

Press Demonstration Ends

The Army wound up its two-day demonstration for the press Wednesday of the Nike's killing power. Included in the demonstration were firings of Corporal and Honest John rockets.

Newsmen saw Army launching crews with only four weeks of training fire six Nikes at a propeller-driven drone target, and score three hits and two "lethal" near-misses. The sixth Nike blew itself up aloft when its radar mechanism failed.

On Monday, two Nikes were fired at a 500-mile-an-hour drone target at 15,000 feet, and brought it down. Monday's firings of Corporal and Honest John were also flat on the ground targets.

Wednesday's drone targets traveled at only 18 miles an hour, but ranged from 10,000 to 20,000 feet and bobbed about in the wind to make their seven-foot wing span and 10-foot length a very slippery target.

Incredible Speed

But the newsmen saw Nike, a missile 20 feet long and one foot in diameter, climb with incredible speed to 10,000 feet and then home tenaciously on the small, wind-tossed targets with deadly effect.

Army spokesmen made these claims for the controversial anti-aircraft missile, which the Air Force has compared unfavorably with its Talos, developed by the Navy.

Nike 1, the present model, is "faster and more versatile than any plane with which we are familiar," and can be made to do figure eight aerobatics.

Nike 1 is the only operational anti-aircraft missile now deployed on an operational basis, and is protecting 18 industrial centers in this country.

It can speed as far as 70 miles in 102 seconds to intercept targets, and will be improved to stay beyond the capacities of new aircraft.

Floating Island Pulled Out To Middle of Lake

Dundee, Wis. — (U.P.) — A fleet of motorboats huffed and puffed and managed to pull the floating island of Kettle Moraine into the middle of the lake Wednesday.

The island was anchored in the lake's center. Eventually, the boatmen hope to shove the three-acre island aground somewhere along the west shore, where high winds broke it off last week. The island drifted around a while and then came to rest right in front of Dundee.

Autoist in Lake Describes Escape

Peschiera Del Garda, Italy — (U.P.) — Max Horwick, 35, of Munich, Germany, told today how he rescued himself when his car plunged into Lake Garda and sank to the bottom 67 feet deep.

"I realized I could not open the door of my car so I waited until the car was almost full of water, took a deep breath and bailed out through a window."
