

YMCA to Hold Charm School For Teenagers

A charm school for junior high school girls in the Rogue valley will be held June 11 through June 15 from 10 a. m. to 12 noon each morning, at the YMCA according to the "Y" office.

This will be a "pilot program" to be used to measure needs among young teenage girls for help in developing good posture habits, knowledge of wardrobe planning on a budget, skill in hair styling and skin care, and understanding of diet problems. It is stated. The sessions will be limited to an enrollment of 40, there will be nominal charge.

Each class in the series, running for two-hour periods, will be conducted by a valley woman who specializes in a field related to the topic she will cover. Miss Colleen Hope will lead the first class discussion, "She Walks With Grace," a workshop session on proper posture.

Following Miss Hope, Mrs. John Vaughn will demonstrate hair styling, and will also discuss skin care problems and their solutions with the girls. Later in the week Mrs. Cora Calame of Leon's will help the girls plan wardrobes on a budget, there will be a discussion session on "What Really Makes a Girl Beautiful," and the week's school will conclude with Mrs. Tom MacLeod's discussion about diet problems.

Sponsored by the girls' work committee of the YMCA, whose chairman is Mrs. Robert Newland, the committee working on the arrangements is made up of Mrs. Milo Kubalek, Mrs. John Vaughn and Mrs. Lou Cranston. Girls interested in securing further information or registering for the school should call the Y, phone 2-6295, and then call at the Y office in person to complete registration, it is stated.

Hobbies Not Whole Answer To Problems of the Aged

By ELIN LAKE United Press Correspondent

New York — (U.P.) — It takes more than the "mass prescription, have a hobby" to solve the problems of our aged persons, says a veteran woman social worker.

Not that Dr. Margaret Blenkner is opposed to hobbies. "They're fine," she said, "if a person has had a hankering to take up some project and never had time until retirement. But unfortunately, most of our aged today are of a generation which believed in 10 hours of work a day and no putting off."

"They are not likely to work up much enthusiasm for hobbies in the last 15 or 20 years of their life."

Dr. Blenkner, 45, has just begun a three-year study of what can be done to help the aged. It is sponsored by the Community Service Society of New York, financed by a $225,000 grant from the Rockefeller fund.

"Much has been done to determine problems of older persons," she said, "but little on how to solve them."

The need is there. She pointed out that there are some 13,000,000 persons who are 65 or older, or one out of every 12 persons. The ratio grows each year.

The society's study has been underway only a few weeks, but Dr. Blenkner says that already some of the answers are shaping up. She emphasizes that problems vary with the individual, but it usually is not wise for older persons to live with their children and in-laws.

This, often makes them feel too old to be useful, so they sit alone doing nothing while the rest of the family goes about a regular routine.

The social worker says that in general communities are lagging in adjustment to care of older citizens. A few so-called golden age groups have been formed, but not enough. She believes discussion forums, arts and crafts clubs and other social organizations for the 65 and up should get more civic attention.

And, she says, the younger persons must change their attitude toward their elders.

"We're the ones who label them aged or aging," she says. It should be understood, she adds, that not only is there a definite role in life for those over 65, but it is a vital and useful one.

Dr. Blenkner says incidentally that the woman who has held an outside job faces age with less of a problem than the woman who was "just a housewife."

"The working woman has a continuing interest even after the children are grown and moved away," she said.
