

TABLE ROCK Vacation Bible School Set

By R. E. NEALON

About 40 members of the Table Rock Community club were present Friday evening at the potluck dinner in TouVelle park, which was the last meeting of the season for the club. Everyone had an enjoyable time, despite the fact that the mosquitoes were a little more alert than usual.

Mr. Bill Bishop is selling some of her household goods, furniture and furnishings, also poultry, livestock, farm tools and miscellaneous items, prior to leaving about June 15 for their new home in Kansas City, Kan.

Many parents and other local people attended the eighth grade graduation ceremonies at Central Point Tuesday night, where eight local students were among the class. Richard Morris is the lone high school graduate from the Table Rock district this year.

Wednesday was sheep shearing day for the Table Rock farm herds. They were rounded up between showers and threatening thunderstorms. Among those having their woolly 46 cent coats removed were Abigail, the Doty bumper sheep, and Jennie, the Bishop bumper, the mother of Booker T, and Lucy.

Don Grissom, the obliging Lake Creek fletcher, did the trimming, the same bashful bachelor that not so long ago we were trying to find a wife mate for. This time he had in his car a bassinet with some jingling doodads strung across the top, and he tells us he has a wife at home and something to go in the bassinet that keeps him awake at night, but so far hasn't had to walk the floor with.

At the primary election May 18 at the schoolhouse some 250 voters managed to get to the polls, which was a few over half the registered voters in the precinct.

Bob Ruhl's "Purely Preferential" candidates seemed to fare pretty well, with Phil Hitchcock leading McKay, Elmo Smith winning for governor, Mark Hatfield for secretary of state, and Walt Nunley nosing out Rode for district attorney.

On the Democratic ballot, Wayne Morse got 111 votes to his opponent's 15, four write-ins for senator on the Republican ballot, and four write-ins on the Democratic ballot for vice president. But strange as it may seem, Robert Holmes was badly beaten by Lew Wallace, who had withdrawn from the race several weeks before the election.

Friday evening, after the polls were closed we asked people we happened to meet if they had voted. The first lady we asked said she and her husband hadn't voted for eight years.

Altogether, we asked some 12 persons, people that we suspected had failed to exercise their right of suffrage. Our suspicions proved correct, as not one of those we questioned had voted at the election, and the time since they had voted ran from two years to never. Most of them were not registered, some had never been. The reasons for not voting were varied, running from not being interested to changing locations, too much trouble and not being allowed to vote.

One lady claiming that she voted two years ago in the Willow Springs precinct, but when she asked for a ballot there found her name was not on the poll book, the mistake presumably being made in the county clerk's office.

Of those questioned, ten would have voted Democratic, and two said they would like to have voted on both ballots.

The Ray Doran family spent last Sunday visiting with relatives near Crescent City, Calif.

Mrs. W. M. Howsley left by motor car last week for points in Missouri to spend several weeks visiting relatives.

Among recent visitors here who were residents of our community in days gone by were Mr. and Mrs. William Barton, the former Grace Morrison who lived here as a child, the Morrison home being located near what is now the Aubrey Taylor home.

Mrs. Clyde Briggs of Oakland, Calif., and her son, Keith Gregory and family, visited here with relatives at the E. W. Robinson home.

Jimmy Halfhill, airman second class of the U. S. Air Force, is spending a short leave of absence here with home folks, having just completed, passing with honors, a course at the Air Research Mfg. Co. From here he will go to the training base at Elgin, Fla.

According to a news release in a recent issue of the Central Point American, two citizens of our local community appeared before a meeting of the school board of District 6 and protested the turning over to the Table Rock Sunday school the now-vacant school building. In checking with the school board we found that the opposition implied that the school board might be turning over the property to an irresponsible group that would let the building go to rack with no funds to repair it, and perhaps disband, letting the property fall into other hands that might not operate it for the good of the community.

As to being responsible, we don't know of any other group that would be more morally fit or dependable to handle a deal like this and keep it on a respectable basis than a Sunday school.

As to disbanding, we have been around here for a number of years and have seen organizations of many kinds come and go, but since we can remember this community has always maintained a Sunday school where all were welcome, irrespective of race, creed, or church affiliation.
