Shopping Habits of Women Subject of Careful Studies

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press correspondent

New York — (UPI) — As customers, women never have been so right as they are today.

The shopping habits, color preferences, fashion opinions and clothing budgets are subjects of regular and careful studies. Advisory boards of average women shoppers help the stores pick styles.

One exclusive Fifth Avenue store now is tabulating thousands of questionnaires which will give new insight into the wishes of women shoppers of all ages, income brackets and social levels.

Even the wishes of little girls are regarded as commands. A manufacturer who makes more than one million children's coats annually reports that the most profitable way to decide new styles is to ask a jury of six-to-12-year-olds.

Children Select Clothes

The manufacturer claims he got the idea after watching small girls shop for clothes with their mothers. Only one short generation ago a girl tried on a dress for size only—not to pass her judgment on mother's taste. If mother bought it, daughter wore it. If daughter didn't like it, she wore it anyway.

But things have changed. Now little girls have a loud voice in their own wardrobes.

"Why I've seen mother put a three-year-old girl on a counter with a lot of hats and tell her to pick out the one she wants," marvelled Jesse Block, the coat manufacturer who calls in a children's jury to view styles twice each year.

Block, a balding, cheerful father of three sons, admits he recalls nothing like this adult solicitude when he was a boy.

"I never had anything but a sailor suit with a whistle in the pocket," he sighed. "Mother took me to the same store and got the same suit year after year."

His children's jury, however, helps him to anticipate the whims of pint-sized customers accustomed to telling mothers what they want.

Style-Conscious Girls
"I get from 12 to 18 girls from public and private schools to come to the showroom," Block explained. "I ask the schools to choose girls who seem especially conscious of styles. When we spot one who is unusually bright we ask her back a second and third time."

Unlike adult fashion audiences, these youthful judges do not sit in polite silence if they see something they don't like. They are likely to emit loud "uhs."

They're equally frank when a style takes their fancy. One of Block's last winter's coats had a hat, parasol and handbag to match.

"When the little girl came out carrying that parasol and holding the handbag, the kids screamed," he said.

The style was a screaming success, as it turned out.
