Fifty 4-H Members Leave for School

Fifty 4-H club members from Jackson county left today from the courthouse to spend 10 days to the annual 4-H summer school at Oregon State college in Corvallis.

The 25 boys and 25 girls will attend classes there devoted to home economical and agricultural subjects. A special feature of the summer school will be a junior leadership workshop for members 15 years and older. The afternoon program will include band, chorus, athletics and the evenings will be devoted to entertainment and recreation. They will return on June 22.

To Accompany Group

The group will be chaperoned by Mrs. Everett Gibson, Mrs. Clinton Charley, Jackson county 4-H leaders; Mrs. Joanne Weatherford, county home economic agent; and Glenn Klein and Miss Marjorie Hattan, county 4-H club agents.

California-Nevada Air Travel Necessary

San Jose, Calif. — (U.P.) — Air travel between Nevada and California has become a necessity rather than a luxury, according to the lieutenant governors of the two states.

The state executives, Harold Powers of California and Rex Bell of Nevada, testified before the Civil Aeronautics Board Monday in support of Southwest Airways' request to extend air routes from Sacramento to Reno and from Bakersfield to Las Vegas.

Support also came from Joseph Hicks, manager of the Reno Municipal airport, who deplored the lack of regular air carrier service to Reno.

He said regular carriers brought 12,351 passengers into Reno last year compared with 66,000 passengers who flew in on chartered flights.

CAB Examiner Ferdinand D. Moran is conducting the hearings.

MRS. D. S. L. — Our girl supports a man.

LOUISE—I'm tiding over his bad luck.

MRS. D. S. L.—Our daughter, Louise, works as an office secretary and earns good money, but contributes only $10.00 a week home. My husband and I were perfectly willing to let her keep the rest of her money as long as we thought she was saving some and using the rest for clothes and other personal uses.

Actually, we have just learned she has not saved a penny and spends very little on herself. It has come as a shock to us that she has been lending or giving money to a young man. How long this has been going on we do not yet know, but if she ever had any money saved up, it has all gone to him.

We are terribly upset about this, but we do not know what to do. If we were to refuse to let her stay home unless she contributed a fair share of her salary, she would have much less to give her young man, but we would risk a bitter break with her. Of course, it is not merely the money that concerns us, but the awful position she is placing herself in.

LOUISE—I kept this a secret from my parents because I knew they would never understand. This young man and I are in love with each other, but we cannot marry because of his present circumstances. He is working as a salesman in a field where there are large commissions, but he has not been fortunate as yet. I want him to stick to it and I am enabling him to do this by helping to finance him over his bad period.

I had a difficult enough time persuading him to let me help him, but now my parents are making life thoroughly miserable for me by quarreling about it. The trouble is that they have no faith in my judgment.

THE COUNCIL: Louise should not expect her parents to have faith in her judgment because she has not shown good judgment in dealing with this problem.

To begin with, she should have brought the young man and her parents together from the start. If they had a good opinion of him, they might conceivably feel less opposition to her course, even though it seems quite doubtful.

As it is, they see the spectacle of a young man, unknown to them, sponging off their daughter on the pretext that he is about to strike it rich. On the face of it, the parents are not to be blamed for being wrought up.

There is, on the other hand, nothing wrong in a girl helping the young man she loves to overcome a temporary economic difficulty, but the circumstances become all-important. The parents are entitled to know this young man quite well before countenancing anything so unusual. If they can approve of him and if there is a definite engagement, some financial help would be in order.

If Louise is foolish enough to involve herself so peculiarly, the parents would be protecting her
