Foreign Aid Cuts False Economy, Senators Declare

Washington—(U.P.)—Ten Republican senators warned today that House cuts in President Eisenhower's foreign aid program will weaken U.S. allies and boost defense spending.

They called the cuts false economy.

The senators, headed by Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.) issued their statement as the Senate Foreign Relations committee met behind closed doors to begin work on the foreign aid bill. Chairman Walter F. George (D-Ga.) said the committee hoped to vote out a bill by the end of the week.

Won't Save Money

The GOP senators said the slashing of $1,100,000,000 by the House from the President's $4,900,000,000 program "does not mean that money will be saved."

"Not greater strength but weakened allies and lessened defenses, not tax cuts but increased defense expenditures will be the eventual result of drastic impairment of the mutual security program," the senators said.

All-Out Plea

Mr. Eisenhower's top aides relayed an all-out plea for his foreign aid program at a White House conference Tuesday with Senate leaders.

The Republicans and Democratic leaders said that "No commitments were given and none was asked."

George said he felt the House cut was "too deep." He told reporters he did not know what the committee will do but said he felt a $500,000,000 restoration of military aid funds might have a fair chance of being approved by the Senate.

Besides Case, the appeal was signed by Sens. Gordon Allott (Colo.), George H. Bender (Ohio), Prescott Bush (Conn.), James H. Duff (Pa.), Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.), Irving M. Ives (N.Y.), Thomas H. Kuchel (Calif.), Frederick G. Payne (Me.) and William R. Purtell (Conn.).

'Do It Yourself' Cuts Hospital Cost in Half

Winchester, Kan.—(U.P.)—A community "do-it-yourself" project, spread over three years, cut costs in half in providing Winchester with a new 25-bed hospital.

Some 200 men and women volunteers—more than half the town's population—had a hand in the work.

There was no general contract. Townsfolk and some farm people, too, did the plumbing, plastering, wiring and carpentry.
