On the national average, women live 6 years longer than their husbands and are about 3 years younger, making a 9-year difference in the life expectancies of average couples. Thus 13 per cent of women are widows while only 4 per cent of men are widowers. Add this to the fact that men leave their estates, large and small, to their widows and you see why so much of the nation's wealth is in the hands of women.
