Rocket Sled Speeds At 1560 Miles an Hour

Edwards AFB, Calif.—(U.P.)—A sleek, bullet-nosed rocket sled which sped 1560 miles an hour on a two-mile track was credited today with setting a world's speed record for recoverable sleds.

The two-unit, 800-pound sled was propelled by 12 rockets. Five rockets on a "pusher" unit accelerated the sled to more than 620 miles an hour in the first 950 feet.

Then, the remaining seven rockets on the test unit were fired automatically to push the sled to its record pace.
