Piano Still Reigns As Intrument King

Chicago—(U.P.)—In an age of electronics, the piano still reigns as the king of musical instruments. And it is virtually the same in mechanical principle today as it was two centuries ago.

Today's piano, with its 25,000 contact points and 8,000 moving parts, is a direct descendant of three older instruments, the harpsichord, the clavichord and the dulcimer.

According to the American Music Conference, the harpsichord flourished from the 15th to the 18th centuries. The clavichord was popular in 18th century Europe. Both instruments produced all tones at about the same inflexible level of volume. The tone faded at a distance of about 10 feet.

The dulcimer dates back to ancient Asia, according to musical historians.

The Pianoforte

A wooden board with strings, it was played with wooden mallets and was introduced into Europe about the 17th century. It had the advantage of producing loud or soft tones, controlled by the degree of force with which the musician struck the strings.

Most authorities agree that the piano was invented in 1709 by an Italian harpsichord maker named Bartolommeo Cristofori.

Cristofori's first piano was a combination harpsichord, clavichord and dulcimer and could be played both loudly and softly. It was called pianoforte, meaning soft and loud.

By 1830, the modern piano had evolved, although improvements were made from time to time.

A piano frame today supports a total string pull of about 35,000 pounds, more than 17 tons.

The American Music Conference estimated that 20,000,000 Americans play the piano for their own enjoyment and relaxation.

Ashland Votes to Suspend License

Ashland — The Ashland city council this week voted to suspend for 90 days the card table license held by Gene Seitz, proprietor of the Log Cabin, if the city attorney determines it is legal under city ordinances.

Harry Morris, chairman of the police committee, suggested the move as a result of a raid and arrests made in connection with an illegal card game at the Log Cabin recently.

Morris' motion would permit Seitz to re-apply for the license if he desired after the suspension period. However, City Attorney Harry Skerry questioned the legality of the motion because he could not recall provisions in the ordinance for revoking such license for gambling because it was not a gambling ordinance, but a license for recreational purposes.

Skerry suggested he be given an opportunity to check the ordinance.

The council voted to suspend the license if permitted under the ordinance.

DIGNIFIED YOUNGSTERS

Valparaiso, Ind. — (U.P.) — The name of the Valparaiso Parks softball league has been changed to "The Grade School League," at the request of youngsters who objected to the earlier designation of "peewees."
