E-R Commission Going to Courts

Portland —(U.P.)— Before any more work is done in the process of building a exposition-recreation center here, Portland's E-R Commission must go to the courts to clarify its authority.

Such was the opinion of City Attorney Alexander G. Brown in a letter to Mayor Fred L. Peterson. The measure passed at the May primary election restricting selection of a site to the east side of the Willamette river, seriously limits the commission in its earlier-granted authority, according to Brown.

He said that the May 18 amendment limits and, in his opinion, may have appealed much of the grant of authority contained in the 1954 enactment, yet without specifically restoring that authority to the city council.

Brown went on to say that though the intent of the promoters of the initiative was that the facility be on the east side of the main channel of the Willamette, they went much further and struck at the basic fundamental authority of the E-R commission.

The city attorney cautioned the commission to restrict its actions until the Supreme Court decides on the extent of its powers.

The advertiser's highest standard—of circulation value

Every industry has a standard by which its products can be measured.

The jeweler uses the symbol of a pure diamond. In flatware, the word "sterling" and in dinnerware, the word "bone china," represent high standards of quality and value.

For the advertiser, the symbol of the highest standard of circulation value is the emblem of the Audit Bureau of Circulations*. This hallmark means that newspapers or periodicals so identified are measured according to the most highly regarded rules and standards in the advertising and publishing industry.

The fact that we are privileged to display this A.B.C. emblem here means that you can buy advertising in this newspaper as you would make any other sound business investment—on the basis of well known standards, known values.

*This newspaper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulation, a cooperative, nonprofit association of publishers, advertisers, and advertising agencies. Our circulation is audited by experienced A.B.C. circulation auditors. Our A.B.C. report shows how much circulation we have, where it goes, how obtained, and other facts that tell advertisers what they get for their money when they use this paper.
