Agricultural Scientists Attend Conference Here

Forty-eight agricultural scientists from many parts of Oregon, attended a crops and soils research planning conference which started Monday at the southern Oregon branch of the Oregon Agricultural Experiment station.

The scientists met to plan and coordinate research work at experiment stations throughout the state. Dr. J. Ritchie Cowan, Oregon State college agronomist and chairman of the committee in charge of the conference, said this type of coordination helps scientists make the best possible use of data from experiments carried on in various parts of the state.

Station superintendents and other personnel were present from the Central Oregon Experimental area, Redmond; John Jacob Astor Branch Experimental station, Astoria; Klamath Experimental area, Ontario; Umatilla Branch Experimental station, Hermiston; Pendleton Branch Experimental station, Pendleton; Red Soils Experimental area, Oregon City; Sherman Branch Experimental station, Moro; Southern Oregon Branch Experimental station, Medford; and Squaw Butte-Harney Branch Experimental station, Burns.

Through a coordination program, results of research from different parts of the state can be compared and evaluated, giving a wider range of knowledge, Cowan pointed out.

Dr. R. W. Henderson, assistant director of the Oregon Agricultural Experiment station, emphasized the impact of agricultural research on Oregon's economy.

Research Results

A study recently completed shows at least $46,000,000 of the state's $465,000,000 income from agriculture in 1954 was the direct result of research carried on at the state's experimental stations.

As an example of what research has done, Henderson told how improved methods of harvesting, packaging, storing and transporting apples and pears increased the market value of

Russia Loses Bid To Stall Algeria Debate

United Nations, N.Y.—(U.P.)—Russia failed today to gain a new postponement of the U.N. Security council's debate on whether to consider the Algerian question.

The council, by a 7 to 1 vote with 3 abstentions, decided that it would not accede to Russia's request for indefinite postponement of the Algerian question and that it would proceed as quickly as possible to a show-down debate on whether the issue should be debated in the U.N.'s highest peace organ.

Soviet Ambassador Arkady A. Sobolev moved the postponement on a point of order as soon as the council had convened. The council was considering the request of 13 members of the Afro-Asian bloc to decide whether to give a full debate to the dispute between France and the Algerian Nationalists.

The council already had postponed its discussion for five days at Russia's request. Originally summoned for last Thursday, the debate was postponed at Sobolev's request to permit him to get instructions from Moscow.

CONGRESS OK ROAD BILL

Seaton May Be Subpoenaed Over Water Rights of Colorado River

San Francisco (U.P.)—The State of California has threatened to subpoena Secretary of the Interior Fred Seaton in an attempt to inspect certain records bearing on the Colorado river water dispute with Arizona.

Northcutt Ely, attorney for California, voiced this threat Monday before Special Master Simon H. Rifkind, who is hearing the suit filed by Arizona against California.

The records belong to the Bureau of Reclamation. They are in the archives of the Department of Interior. They were available until last week when, Ely charged, the bureau refused to let the California staff members see them.

Arizona and California have differed on the meaning of "beneficial consumptive use."

The term is used in the Colorado river compact and the Boulder Canyon Project Act—two agreements which define the use of Colorado river water.

Ely told Rifkind Monday that he would delay his arguments until today. This was to give U.S. Attorney David R. Warner time to consult his superiors in Washington.

"If it appears the government will not relax its new restrictive order," Ely warned, "I will subpoena the keeper of the archives and Secretary of the Interior Fred Seaton."

After this warning, Arizona then placed Samuel F. Turner, a Phoenix consulting engineer and geologist, on the stand. Arizona attorney John P. Frank had

Dispute Compromise Plan Expected To Get Prompt Signature

Higher Taxes Due In Effect Sunday

Washington (U.P.)—Congress approved and sent to the White House today a compromise $32.9 billion highway construction bill.

The measure calls for increases in federal taxes on gasoline, tires and trucks to help pay the bill.

President Eisenhower is expected to sign the bill promptly.

Salem (U.P.)—W. C. Williams, deputy state highway engineer, said today that federal highway funds totaling, $51,000,000 would be available to Oregon shortly after the road bill is signed by the President.

House Committee Approves Federal Hells Canyon Dam

Washington (U.P.)—The House Interior Committee today approved a bill to authorize federal construction of $350,000,000 dam in Hell's Canyon on the Idaho-Oregon border.

The roll call vote was 15 to 13. With two exceptions, it was along party lines.

The controversial dam would be located on the Snake river.

A similar bill was approved by the Senate Interior Committee last week and Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas said it will be brought up for full Senate action in a week or two.

Action Without Debate

The House committee action was taken without debate. Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall (D-Colo.) called for approval of the bill. Rep. Hamer Budge (R-Ida.) proposed that the measure be sent back to the subcommittee that approved it, with instructions to add to it a state water rights bill.

Budge's motion was lost on a 15 to 6 vote. The final 15 to 13 vote followed.

The dam would be the second highest in the nation. Engineers have called the site the best one remaining on a major stream.

The administration is opposed to the federal dam.

Veto Predicted

The Federal Power Commission last summer granted a license for the site to the Idaho Power Co., which has started the first of three smaller dams.

The company is reported to have spent more than $5,000,000 on the site so far. Passage and presidential signature of the present bill according to legal opinions, would have the effect of cancelling the private company's license.

Opponents of the federal dam, however, have predicted freely the measure would be vetoed by President Eisenhower, if it ever clears Congress.
