Widow Renews Fight On Gold Regulations

Portland—(U.P.)—A widow who owns a gold mine she says would be worth $40,000,000 if she were allowed to sell at a reasonable unrestricted market value has renewed her fight against government gold laws and regulations.

Mrs. Gladys Laycock of Prairie City filed suit in Federal Court yesterday to enjoin Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey from enforcing regulations dating back to 1934 which put the price of gold at $35 an ounce. She claimed the gold price fixing order is without authority under any law or the constitution.

Earlier this year Mrs. Laycock attacked the constitutionality of gold laws but was turned down without getting a directed ruling on their validity in various courts.

She contends she can't afford to work the mine at the present price of gold.
