Dr. West Elected To Synod Committees

Dr. D. Kirkland West, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, was appointed Synod chairman of the stewardship and promotion committee for Oregon while attending the Presbyterian Synod of Oregon meeting in Portland last week.

Dr. West, who spoke to the group of his trip around the world last summer, was also elected to a committee to plan for suitable retirement homes to meet the problem of elderly people who wish to retire to a church directed home.

He was also elected pastor advisor to the Presbyterian Men's Clubs in the state.

Compromise Sought For Portland Center

Portland—(U.P.)—A move to reconcile conflicting east and west side interests in Portland for location of an exposition-recreation center by putting portions of the facility on both sides of the Willamette river was underway here today.

The Portland city council agreed yesterday to promote a meeting of proponents of both the South Auditorium and Delta Park sites to effect a compromise.

The council also agreed that if an agreement could not be reached for location of the $8,000,000 center, a new ballot measure should be prepared for the November election to allow the voters to pick the site.

Evening Hours Listed For EP Branch Library

Eagle Point—Mayor Don Ashpole of Eagle Point has announced that commencing immediately the Eagle Point branch library of the Jackson county library system will be open each Monday from 7 to 9 p.m. The new hours are in addition to regular Monday and Friday afternoon hours from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

According to Mrs. Jessie Tyler, branch librarian, the additional hours are expected to attract an increased number of readers to the library, especially those who are occupied in business during the daytime hours.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, a newspaper editor, a women's page editor and two newspaper writers. These consult with clergymen of all faiths and denominations. All letters are held in complete confidence.

Len—I have made a mess of our life.
Janice—I can't be young for him.

Len—I seem to have made a terrible mess of my family life and I am desperately eager to make amends, but my wife seems unwilling or unable to respond to my new attitude.

At 31, I have three children, a new home and an excellent job, which I have achieved as the result of hard work and college studies in my spare time over a period of more than four years. Now that I have at last arrived somewhere and can give my family some attention to make up for the years of neglect, I find that my wife no longer responds to my affection. In short, I seem to be unable to recapture that which I once ignored in my concentration on paying the family bills and getting ahead.

I would do anything to induce my wife to feel for me as she did in the early days, when, I must admit, I scarcely valued her love. I have sought advice and help, but the sum total of all this has been the admonition that I must court her again with patience and persistence.

I find it very hard to act on this advice, because the craving for love and affection is persistent, but hardly patient. My wife tells me frankly that she cannot bring herself to revert to the status of a romantic young girl. She has lived through years of emotional neglect and loneliness, aggravated by economic problems, including a ceaseless flow of doctor bills for the youngsters. Now, she says, she is much older than her years.

Janice—I feel as though my husband ran out on me, perhaps because he found the classroom easier to take than the problems of raising three babies. He has kept young, but he left all the aging to me, and he is now dissatisfied with the result. I wish I could be the way he wants me to be. I also wish he would let me be alone instead of making demands on me.

The Council: Len has had the benefit of good advice, but he finds himself unable to act on it; or, rather, he finds himself unable to be patient.

Yet it is patience that is the key to Janice's emotional state. She is wrong when she believes that she cannot feel young. She can recover from her wounded

Governor Presents Plaque at K. Falls

Klamath Falls—(U.P.)—Gov. Elmo Smith presented a safety plaque to the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company at Klamath Falls yesterday, awarded by the National Safety Council for improvements in accident frequency and severity rates for the year 1955.

John B. Bishop, branch manager of Weyerhaeuser, accepted the plaque on behalf of the 800 local employees.

The plaque is the highest award given by the National Safety Council.

In order to qualify, a plant must improve 44 per cent in frequency of accidents and 30 per cent in severity. The Weyerhaeuser Klamath Falls plant had a 67 per cent improvement in frequency and 83 per cent improvement in severity.

In making the award, Governor Smith said, "It is indeed an honor for Oregon to have one of its major industries earn such an award. It takes the teamwork you have shown here to accomplish such a record."
