Chemists Influence Fashion; Hat Designers Use Much Fur

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Correspondent
New York—(U.P.)—A week in Manhattan:

Chemists continue to influence fashion with test tube experiments that become new dress fabrics. The latest result, which will be used in the clothes we wear next fall and winter, is a new synthetic fiber faille.

It is a look-alike for pure silk faille. This means women can have faille dresses that wash and iron. Pressing problems on arnel faille dresses and coats will be simplified too. The new faille, developed by the Fabre corporation, will not get shiny with pressing.

Outdoor girls never had a better chance to pick rustic-sounding fall wardrobes that look civilized. Next season they can wear antelope skirts and coats with racoon collars, for instance. Or choose palomino suede trimmed with racoon.

Bonnie Cashin, sportswear designer responsible for both choices, has decided that racoon is the sportswear fur of the year. It's not the clipped racoon of recent ladies' coats, either, but the oldtime shaggy version.

Miss Cashin put shaggy racoon collars on a black antelope leather fingertip length coat for fall and on another short coat of palomino beige suede. She even lined a red leather hooded cape with racoon. They can be worn with matching leather skirts or with more conventional fabric skirts.

The sponsors of the Miss Universe beauty contest discovered they were one girl short when they began checking the expected entries from overseas due here on Sunday. Their list included Miss Tunis. The airlines had no reservations for her.

A cablegram to North Africa brought back this cryptic reply: "We did not pick a Miss Tunis. If we did, she would not travel anyway."

The contest, which begins on July 12 in Long Beach, Calif., now will have 39 bathing beauty delegates, including Miss United States, instead of the 40 listed on the sponsors' first announcement.

Short hair still is popular with a majority of women, but long hair is the rule among fashion models, the girls who usually forecast our own hair styles six months in advance.

"They're using only long hair now for high fashion photographs," a successful model explained. "I'd like to cut mine, but they won't let me."

Designers are doing their best to see that every woman has a fur hat, even though fur coats supplied by husbands never have managed to equal wifely demands.

Mink, beaver, leopard, zebra, otter, fox and any other fur ever made into coats have been turned into hats by top designers. In recent fall and winter hat previews, designers have featured everything from a mink beret to a moleskin cloche.

To take your favorite meringue-covered pie to a picnic, insert four toothpicks around the center before covering with waxed paper. The toothpicks keep the paper propped away from the meringue.

Mission Schools To Be Held by Methodist Church

The annual school of missions for Methodist Woman's Society of Christian Service in Oregon will be held at Camp Magruder, near Manzanita, Ore., July 15 to 20.

Following a pattern established last year, leaders of the mission school will then come to Southern Oregon college, Ashland, to conduct a similar school for members of Wesleyan Service guild. This will be July 23-27.

A study of the book "Southeast Asia" will be conducted by Dr. Dorcas Hall, New York City, executive secretary of the section of education and cultivation, and head of the organization and promotion for the woman's division of the Methodist church. Dr. Hall is a former missionary to India.

Others on the faculty of the school will be Dr. Gertrude Boyd Crane of Pacific university, Forest Grove; Mrs. W. W. Geiger, Portland, jurisdiction secretary of Christian social relations for WSCS; Mrs. Eugene V. Hamblen, Oak Ridge, Ore., conference recording secretary; Mrs. Paul Kitzmiller, Dallas, Wesleyan guild secretary and Mrs. Wayne C. Stauffer, Eugene, conference secretary of Christian social relations.

A guest will be Miss Evelyn DeVries, who recently returned to this country on furlough from her work as missionary in southern Rhodesia, Africa. She is head of an African girls' hostel in Umattli.

These summer mission schools are open to any Methodist woman, and a large group from Medford is expected to attend both the Camp Magruder and Southern Oregon college sessions.

THE Teen Touch

Bobbies are styled for teen figure flattery. A girdle or bra designed for older figures just doesn't have the same knowing teen touch with your lovely lines. The bra may fit in the cup . . . but isn't quite right across the back and under the arms. Girdles are too loose at the waist and don't fit smoothly over the hip. Don't settle for less than your very own teen-proportioned bras and girdles that do so much more for your figure.
