

Requests Seek Soft Drinks for Fourth

Phoenix, Ariz. — (U.P.) — More than 1,000 requests to make good on a July 4th promise by disc jockeys had been received by radio station KRUX here Saturday.

The record reeliners had promised a soft drink to everyone in Arizona if no traffic deaths were recorded on the state's highways during the Fourth.

No one was killed, and the station was in the position of having to buy soda pop for the state's 1,040,000 residents, at a cost of $50,000.

"We're ready to live up to our end of this bargain," said David Bartell, chairman of the board of Bartell Radio Stations, which own KRUX.

"We've received more than 1000 letters and cards requesting the soft drinks," he said, "and we anticipate more. You know it gets pretty warm in Arizona at this time of year."

The offer was an ad lib by one of the DJ's, who figured he had a safe promise to make, because Arizona regularly recorded traffic deaths on holidays.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, a newspaper editor, a women's page editor and two newspaper writers. These consult with clergymen of all faiths and denominations. All letters are held in complete confidence.

Lois — My sister's ethics shock me.

Margie — Lois is really quite naive.

Lois — My little sister has developed a shockingly cynical attitude, and to make matters worse, my mother seems to encourage her.

We are planning a party, and my sister is inviting boys and girls and wants me to do the same, but she objects to a few of my friends, saying that they would be "too much competition" for us with the boys. She is not inviting her own closest girl friend because, she says, this girl is "too aggressive" with the boys.

I have not had many dates with boys although I am 20, but I would not think of cutting out my closest girl friends from a party list, although they probably have an easier way with boys than I do. I am not so much shocked at my little sister as I am at my mother for agreeing that we should be so cynical.

Margie — Lois thinks of me as her "little sister" because I am three years younger, but she is actually younger than I am socially. I have had more dates, and I have learned that a girl has to use her head, while Lois leaves everything to chance. Her girl friends do not, however; they calculate wisely and they get all the boy friends.

Mother agrees with me because she sees Lois making no progress and being passed up by the boys for girls who are not nearly as pretty or as clever as she.

I am not quite as cynical as Lois thinks I am. I could take a little competition because I have learned how to hold my own with boys. But I want Lois to get some attention at our party and get some dates. That is why I refuse to invite my closest girl friend. A girl of 17 may be "little" in my sister's eyes, but she can be strong competition to a 20-year-old who feels stiff and awkward when boys are around.

The Council: Mother and younger sister are to be commended for their thoughtfulness, but they cannot hope to solve Lois' problem by outraging her sense of ethics. It is to be questioned whether a large party of mixed age groups is the ideal vehicle for introducing Lois to boys or overcoming her feeling of shyness with them.

Search Continues for Missing Utah Girl

Widstoe, Utah — (U.P.) — Ground and aerial searches fanned out again Saturday to continue the search for a 2-year-old Idaho girl missing since a Fourth of July picnic in the badlands of Southern Utah.

Two bloodhounds flown from Las Vegas, Nev., were used in the search yesterday but were unable to find Vilate Young, the missing daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kerry Young, Montevideo, Ida. In each of nine tries the dogs, handled by Deputy Sheriff Robert W. Kruticka of Las Vegas, came to a dead end when they reached a road.

More than 200 volunteers pushed their way through the sagebrush and sand for a two-mile radius from where the girl disappeared. They found no trace of the child.

ground, while avoiding the obviously touchy issue of selection to avoid "competition." If Lois is a wallflower at parties, it may be wiser to avoid parties and concentrate on simpler get-togethers. In a small party it may be much easier to encourage conversation and to draw out Lois' qualities by bringing her into the conversation.

Since Margie is determined to help her sister, she probably could do a great deal to guide the conversation in the direction of Lois at a small dinner party. We would advise the avoidance of a frontal attack on Lois' shyness in favor of an indirect approach, and we would certainly advise a quick backing away from the ethical issue of avoiding "competition." Lois' high-minded scruples should not be attacked.

Four Killed in 10 Days in Feather River Canyon Work

Oroville, Calif. — (U.P.) — Cave-ins in the huge Poe hydroelectric tunnel under construction in the Feather River canyon have taken the lives of four workmen in the past 10 days.

Two men were killed Friday when hundreds of tons of rock crashed down in a section where a 55-man crew were working. On June 26, two men were killed and two others injured when shoring collapsed on a work crew at the other end of the seven-mile tunnel.

Friday's victims were identified as W. C. May, Oroville, and Harlan Henecke, 48, Pulga, Calif.

After the bodies were removed, the crew began frantic digging into the huge rock pile for a third man who was missing. However, the missing man, James Sheldon of Oroville, had jumped into the ambulance to accompany the dead men and was not hurt.

The tunnel is part of the $40 million Poe project which, when completed, will carry water seven miles through rock to a Pacific Gas and Electric company power plant.

Reports from the tunnel indicated seepage may have caused yesterday's cave-in. Sheldon said the men were given a little warning of the collapse by a rumbling noise. He said the 15 men working directly below the cave-in scattered for safety. "Thirteen of us made it," Sheldon said. "The other two didn't."

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—SEVEN

Timing of Last Spray Important to Fruit

Recently imposed spray residue tolerance makes the timing of the last spray before fruit harvest of great importance, according to C. B. Cordy, county horticulture agent, and L. G. Gentner, of the Southern Oregon Experiment station.

They pointed out that fruit cannot be sold if residues exceed the tolerance. Since pre-washing methods do little toward reducing residues, any fruit seized because of excess residue will have to be destroyed.

Precaution Named

Careful observation of the interval between spraying and harvest is the only precaution that can be taken against excessive residue, the officials said. An interval of 30 days is required between harvest and the use of DDT, aramite or ziram. Fourteen days is sufficient interval with parathion or EPN, and three days with malathion.

The horticulturists emphasized that spray should not be applied at closer intervals than these in emergencies, they recommend TEPP for mites and psylla. Harvest can proceed three days after this material is applied.

The third cover spray on pears should be completed 30 days before the fruit is harvested. Earliest bartlett will be picked Aug. 9 and earliest D'Anjou Aug. 27, they said. Spray on all varieties except early bartlett should be completed on July 20.

They recommended 7 pounds of 50 per cent DDT plus 6 pounds aramite plus 6 pounds malathion or 3 pounds parathion or 3 pounds EPN per acre or 1½ pounds DDT, 1½ pounds aramite and 1 pound malathion per 100 gallons in a hose rig. Seven pounds of Ziram per acre should be added where storage rots have been a problem. On Comice, the horticulturists recommended 6 pounds chlorobenzilate as a substitute for aramite.

On apples the spray should be applied at once, they said. Ten pounds 50 per cent DDT per acre is recommended. For aphids, they suggest adding 12 pounds malathion or 6 pounds parathion.

A third cover is also suggested for late ripening cherries, such as Lamberts or sour cherries. Two pounds of methoxychlor in 100 gallons of water is recommended if visible residue is not undesirable.

The horticulturists pointed out that this has a low toxic quality and the fruit can be eaten five days after the application or anytime after the application if the fruit is washed.
