Allowable Cut of Sustained Yield to Be Increased Here

Sustained yield allowable cut of timber on Rogue River National forest will be increased 14 million board feet annually, according to forest service officials.

The new compilation, which places the cut at 117 million feet, will be effective immediately.

Supervisor J. H. Wood said the increase is the result of a number of developments, including application of better inventory data and closer utilization standards.

Cruise and scale volumes made available by widely spread timber sales in recent years were used to adjust older inventory estimates, Wood said. Weight was given certain tree species now being utilized which were not considered merchantable previously.

Better logging equipment and methods are developing mountainous areas not operated in earlier years. More efficient utilization in the woods and at industrial plants result in fuller use of each tree harvested, he stated.

Timber Inventory
A detailed timber inventory at all working circles on the Rogue River forest will be started this year. Aerial photographs will provide one of the major tools for the survey, Wood said. The photographs will be used as a base to delineate timber types.

Field survey parties will check the timber types on the ground to establish volumes and growth. The inventory is expected to substantiate the present increase in allowable cut with some possibility of further upward adjustment, Wood stated.

Contracts will be let this summer for aerial photography. Forest officers anticipate the detailed inventory job will be completed in two or three years.

Medical Society Urges Polio Shots

The Jackson County Medical society is solidly behind the current campaign of the county chapter of the National Foundation for infantile Paralysis for vaccinations with the Salk anti-polio vaccine, Dr. Alvin Roberts of Central Point, Society president, said today.

"We are most happy to wholeheartedly join in this campaign inasmuch as the polio season is only a few short weeks ahead," Dr. Roberts said. He pointed out that recipients of the vaccine now have time to build up a considerable degree of immunity before the expected polio season starts in August. The polio season usually continues through October in this area.

The medical society some time ago agreed on a charge of $10 for the series of three shots, the doctor said. This barely covers the doctor's cost of the vaccine and of administering the shots.

The Medford planning commission last night decided to discuss with the county planning commission the possibility of obtaining the services of Harold F. Wise and associates, Palo Alto, Calif., planning engineers.

Wise discussed various plans for metropolitan areas with members of the Medford council and the city and county planning commissions last month.

Arrange Meeting
Commission Chairman Tom Wray directed City Manager Robert Duff to arrange a meeting with county planners to determine if the county group wishes to participate in hiring the firm.

Wray pointed out that a general plan for the metropolitan area is desirable because new industries and businesses considering locating here inquire about the general plan of development.

Duff said Medford is about the only city in the state which has not taken advantage of urban development funds from the federal government.

The commission agreed that if the county felt it could not participate in hiring the services of a planning engineer at this time, the Medford group should proceed with what funds it has available. A total of $2,300 was budgeted to the commission this year, an amount which may be doubled through federal funds.

The planning commission recommended to the council that a change from two family (1B) to limited commercial (3A) in five lots in block 11 of Laurelhurst addition be approved.

Also recommended to the council were annexation of an area west of Lewis ave. and south of Main st.; and a request for a three-foot set back for St. Mary's school gymnasium for expansion purposes.

The commission denied a request by petition for a change of zone in the Willamette ave. area.

KNOWLAND REVEALS PRESIDENT'S PLANS

Gettysburg, Pa. (U.P.)—There is no doubt about it now. President Eisenhower is definitely a candidate for a second term.

He disclosed his intentions almost casually today in a meeting here with Republican congressional leaders who flew up from Washington. He told them he feels in better shape than he did before his June 9 abdominal operation and is looking forward to a vigorous and active campaign.

Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland of California broke the news just outside the President's office at Gettysburg college.

"The President reiterated the fact that he will be a candidate for reelection in 1956," Knowland declared.

Nixon Not Mentioned In President's Remarks
He told reporters the President did not discuss whether he still wants Vice President Richard M. Nixon for his running mate. But he said Mr. Eisenhower did say he is still in the presidential race and that "he and we are looking forward to a vigorous and active campaign under his leadership."

The news, its timing was a surprise, ended weeks of speculation over whether the President's operation might prompt him to reverse his Feb. 29 announcement about continuing in the race.

There were quick reverberations in the political world.

Republicans Happy
Republicans happily proclaimed their pleasure and House GOP Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. predicted a "landslide victory" in November. For the record at any rate, Democrats said they were glad Mr. Eisenhower will run but predicted he will be beaten.

In Chicago, former President Harry S. Truman said it wasn't news to him. Adlai E. Stevenson, front runner in the Democratic presidential stakes, said he was "delighted to hear the President feels in good enough health to run again."

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) also a Democratic presidential hopeful, said he hoped Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower reached the second term decision "without letting a lot of political pressure play a part."

Knowland was asked whether Mr. Eisenhower had given any thoughts to changing his mind about a second term in view of his major operation to remove an intestinal obstruction just a month ago. In reply he said simply: "The fact remains he's in the race."

Hegerty All Smiles
By Knowland's side when he broke the second term news was Presidential Press Secretary James E. Hegerty. He was all smiles and nodded as the word on the President's intentions unfolded.

Knowland said the President told him "he felt he is in better shape than he was when he made the announcement last Feb. 29" that he was going to run for a second term.

Knowland said Mr. Eisenhower feels he is still continuing his previous plans to run.

Knowland said he had not doubted that the President would run. But he added with a smile, "This clarifies the atmosphere."

The circumstances of today's announcement contrasted sharply with the manner in which the President originally announced his second term intentions.

His Feb. 29 announcement was made at a jam-packed White House news conference after weeks of uncertainty and suspense over his intentions. That night, the President went on radio and television to explain his decision to the nation.

Today's announcement came almost casually.

Dissolution Will Be Considered by Humane Society

Members of the Southern Oregon Humane society will discuss dissolution of the society, and settlement of business and disposal of property, at a meeting at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Jackson county courthouse auditorium.

The action is being considered, trustees said, because of increased financial problems. The society, they stated, must depend upon its own income, earned through boarding dogs and performance of similar services, plus contributions from individuals.

They pointed out that income from city, county and state has been curtailed gradually and withdrawn creating the present financial problem. It has been further complicated, trustees said, since the United Medford Crusade was formed making it difficult for the society to conduct an independent fund-raising campaign.

Trustees said an application for membership in UMC has been rejected and contributions from the Crusade are only those which are specifically designated for the humane society.

Trustees said they believe there is no other alternative but to discontinue operation and dissolve the society. If members concur, assets of the society and liabilities, the remaining funds will be distributed to some other charitable organization.

Since plans for dissolution were first announced, however, a number of interested people in the area have expressed concern, and are taking steps to see if some means can be found to save the society.

Sentence for Kidd Set Aside by Court

Salem (U.P.)—A two-year prison sentence handed to firebug Richard Ray Kidd of Portland for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle was set aside yesterday by Marion county Circuit court.

Judge George Duncan ordered the Kidd case turned back to the grand jury when Kidd's attorney, Leroy Lomax of Portland, contended that his client did not have the capacity to waive grand jury hearing prior to his trial last month.

Kidd was recently released from Oregon State hospital where he was taken after setting a half million dollar string of fires in Portland.

County Civil Defense Will Establish Emergency Headquarters During Exercise

Jackson county's Civil Defense agency will establish emergency headquarters at the Civil Defense Control center at 7 a.m. July 20, during the nation's Civil Defense exercise, "Operation Alert." July 20-26, according to Maj. Gen. Jim Hicks, county Civil Defense director.

The Oregon Civil Defense will participate in the exercise by simulating a hydrogen bomb drop on Portland during the morning of July 20. Actual and simulated Civil Defense tests will then be made of the evacuation of Portland.

Other counties will support the evacuation by testing communications, traffic control plans, functioning of emergency aid areas and welfare centers and supporting medical facilities.

Radio Communications
Radio communications section of the Jackson county Civil Defense Control center on Antelope rd., in the National Guard area north of Medford, will initiate communications with the state Civil Defense network at Salem. Supervising will be Dwight Albright.

Mobile radio stations will also be dispatched to local Civil Defense headquarters at Shady Cove, Rogue River and Central Point. Mobiles will remain in radio communication with the control center.

As the test progresses, problems of housing, medical support, police and radiological support will be placed before the county Civil Defense deputies for solution.

At 12:10 p.m. all television and radio stations in this area will go off the air except two radio stations, which will give a Civil Defense broadcast on 1240 kc. The procedure is known as Conelrad and is the same procedure that would prevail if there were a real emergency.

Supplies Rushed To Islanders Stricken By Greek Temblor

Athens (U.P.)—Greece rushed food, blood and medical supplies by air and sea today to the tiny volcanic island of Thera, ravaged by an earthquake and battered by a 13-foot tidal wave.

Forty persons were known killed, 20 were missing and 92 were injured in the disaster which rocked Greece's Cyclades Islands in the Aegean Sea on Monday.

Thousands of homeless survivors gathered in open fields or knelt among the ruins of toppled churches today to await help from the mainland.

Many Homes Destroyed
Thera, a crescent-shaped island 12 miles long and three miles wide, was struck by the full force of the quake and a 13-foot tidal wave which followed. Half of the houses on the island were destroyed, along with dozens of public buildings, churches and business places.

Harbor facilities were wrecked, delaying the arrival of aid from Greece. The Athens Red Cross issued an urgent appeal for blood.

Greek Premier Constantine Karamanlis dispatched nine warships to the scene.

Cavendish Cannon, U.S. ambassador to Greece, offered American food parcels, and units of the U.S. 6th Fleet stood by to help in any way possible.

American Views Havoc
Theodor Jeckell, information officer of the U.S. embassy in Athens, surveyed the stricken area from the air.

"Segments of the cliffs were collapsing into the sea," Jeckell reports. "The island's capital (Thera) appeared to be completely razed, as well as the township on the northern tip of the island."

"I saw a small islet in Santorin's (Thera's) harbor that looked as if it had just arisen from the waves. It was still covered with lava."

The area resembled a fuming cauldron throughout the night. Small earth tremors continued to shake Thera, which is also known as Santorin and Santorini. Smoke belched from several volcanic craters on the main island and three adjacent islets.

Frightened islanders feared the continuing tremors were forerunners of another major jolt.

Fire Conditions Still Hazardous

Both the Oregon state forest patrol and Rogue River National forest offices were "hoping for the best" here this morning, as fire conditions remained hazardous on forest lands.

Neither office had reported any fires since Sunday.

The weather outlook was for continued unfavorable conditions, with temperatures near 90 and humidities between 20 and 30 per cent. Yesterday's humidity low tied Sunday's 20 per cent for the lowest of the season. Thunderstorms, which have been in weather predictions for the past few days, were still threatening in higher mountains.

The forest service office said it was concerned about winds yesterday, some of which reached 16 miles per hour in the Applegate, Butte Falls and Ashland districts. A spokesman said conditions were "much worse" than last week.

All 15 state forest patrol lookouts are up in this district. The forest service has about 23 lookouts up now, with all stations manned except several in the highest country.
