

Prop Rips Loose On Canadian Airliner

Windsor, Ont. (U.P.)—Part of a propeller ripped loose from a speedy Trans-Canada Viscount airliner 19,000 feet over Flat Rock, Mich., yesterday and smashed into the fuselage, killing one person and injuring five others.

The four-engined, turbo-prop airplane, en route from Chicago to Toronto, Ont., with 31 passengers and four crew members, made an emergency landing at Windsor airport on three engines. Air officials said the accident was the fault of a "runaway propeller."

WATCH THAT TAPE

Mexico City (U.P.)—Irate beauty contestants charged Monday that the judges "padded the figures" when they reported that Erna Baumann, Miss Mexico of 1956, is a "perfect 35." The contestants said it was only a slip of the judges' tape that made it appear that the 18-year-old blonde beauty, born in Mexico of German parents, measures 35-21-35 from top to bottom. "Miss Baumann's measurements are in no way perfect," snapped one embittered runner-up.

Hells Canyon Fight in Senate Expected To Be Touch-and-Go

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Correspondent

Washington—All the prognostications on the outcome of the Hells Canyon fight that is due to start in the Senate this week are for a touch and go affair all the way.

Both Democrats who are pushing the bill to authorize a high federal dam and Republicans who are trying to kill the bill concede that the issue may be decided by only a vote or two, so closely divided is the Senate on the question.

The outcome could even be determined by timing more than anything—that is, who happens to be out of town when the vote is taken. Even the whereabouts of President Eisenhower may affect the result, for at Gettysburg he is largely removed from the immediate scene of legislative battle on Capitol Hill and unlikely to be intervening personally.

If all the Senate Democrats voted for the Hells Canyon bill, it would be passed by at least the 49-to-47 margin by which they can outvote Senate Republicans. But despite the fact that the Democratic leaders are making this a major party issue, they can't count all their members in the fold, especially several from the Southern wing.

The Southerners are being told with some emphasis by their northern colleagues that the outcome of this question may affect the result of the two hot Senate election campaigns in Oregon and Washington this fall—and if Sens. Wayne Morse and Warren G. Magnuson are defeated Democrats will probably lose control of the Senate and Southern Democrats who now hold the chairmanships of many committees will lose these commanding positions of authority.

But it was not until the Republican National Committee announced 10 days ago that Washington Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, Magnuson's challenger, was to be the keynote of the GOP convention that Southerners began to realize how much the GOP is going to put into the effort to boost Langlie and defeat Magnuson. And reportedly many were converted to the Hells Canyon cause for this political reason.

On the opposition side, the administration, which has backed Idaho Power Co.'s venture in the Snake River, is doing all it can to stop the high dam bill. For this reason most western Republicans are splitting away from the usual bloc of bipartisan western supporters of new federal projects.

Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R-Utah), who led the successful campaign in Congress for the $760 million federal Upper Colorado reclamation-power project, is turning into a leader of the opposition to Hells Canyon. Reportedly, this is in payment of his debt to the administration for its help in putting the Upper Colorado project through.

One western Republican, who has yet to announce his decision, has confided that some time ago he was telephoned by Eisenhower who personally asked him to oppose the high dam bill. This is the administration's big gun, of course, and the fact that Eisenhower has since fallen ill and is now convalescing at Gettysburg may reduce its immediate fire power on wavering Republicans.

Among these are the North Dakota senators, Langer and Young, who often vote with the Democrats on farm and resource issues, particularly those involving public power. It would probably take as much party pressure to line them up against Hells Canyon as it would to get such Southerners as Sen. Harry Byrd to vote for the bill.

The additional factor leading to uncertainty is absenteeism. It is the rarest of occasions that all 96 Senators are on hand for any vote, no matter how vital. So whether there will be more absentee Democrats than Republicans or vice versa when the roll is called may tip the balance for or against the bill, despite all the carefully laid plans of both sides in this titanic political struggle in Congress.

Quotes From the News

New York—Assistant Queens County Attorney Thomas Cullen, on the case of two men arrested for attempting to extort $5,000 from Mrs. Betty Weinberger by claiming to be the kidnapers of her son:

"I think this thing is despicable. I would have more respect for a stickup man."

Washington—Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.) on the $150,000 campaign fund said to have been pledged to his opponent for the Republican senatorial nomination:

"Apparently the would-be king-makers, rudely shaken by the reaction thus far, are desperately trying to fulfill their attempted purge of me."

London—Prime Minister Anthony Eden, in a letter to Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin, on Russia's promised 1,200,000-man armed forces cutback:

"I do not think they are of themselves sufficient if international confidence and security are to develop as we wish."

Chicago—Adlai Stevenson on the selection of Tennessee Gov. Frank Clement as keynote speaker for the Democratic National Convention:

"I think he's a good choice who will adequately state the philosophy of the Democratic Party."

Flagstaff, Ariz.—Delbert L. Staley, a high Mormon official, at the mass funeral for 67 victims of commercial aviation's worst disaster:

"God was not responsible, only imperfect man who was victimized by his own inventions."

Joanne Dru, Mate 'Temporarily' Split

Hollywood (U.P.)—Actress Joanne Dru disclosed today she and her husband, actor John Ireland, have separated "temporarily" following their July Fourth quarrel at a gay Hollywood barbecue party.

The pretty actress, divorced wife of singer Dick Haymes, was released from Cedars of Lebanon hospital yesterday where she was treated for a black eye and broken nose. She said she and the lanky actor separated in an attempt "to work things out."

Miss Dru said she planned no immediate divorce action but admitted she had consulted her attorney. She said she would remain at home until fully recovered from injuries suffered in an alleged auto accident.

The actress, mother of three children by Haymes, claimed the accident occurred when she and Ireland were driving home from the party at the home of actor Mark Stevens. Her friends, however, believed the injuries were a result of the domestic battle.

Roseburg Youth, 17, Drowns in Umpqua

Roseburg (U.P.)—A 17-year-old Roseburg youth drowned in the waters of the South Umpqua river about two miles west of here last night while he and a companion were swimming.

Coroner L. L. Powers identified the victim as Eugene Leroy Engle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Engle of Roseburg.

John McIntyre was swimming with Engle. He told police that his companion suddenly disappeared under the surface of the water and he never saw him again.

The body was recovered about 45 minutes later.
