Grass Crop Yield Reported Good in County This Year

Harvest of merion bluegrass and polycross bent grass is now in progress and yields of both crop are good this year, according to W. B. (Ben) Tucker, county extension agent for agriculture. Tucker said Otto Bohnert, Central Point, and the local experimental station officials are harvesting about 840 pounds of merion bluegrass seed per acre despite a slight outbreak of rust growth on some plants at Bohnert's farm. The seed is expected to bring more than $3.00 per pound.

Bohnert also has 17 acres of polycross bent grass, which is expected to bring more than $15 per pound. The county agent added that a "very good" crop of penlaw fescue has already been harvested and should bring $10 to $12 per pound. This is a new variety of seed for this area, he said, and was planted just last year. It has not yet reached its maximum production year.

The three seed varieties are in particular demand for golf courses, Tucker explained. Polycross bent grass is especially favored for this purpose because it is shallow-rooted, can be cut close and offers little resistance to a golf ball. It also has a uniform color, but requires more water than either penlaw fescue or merion bluegrass he pointed out. Merion bluegrass is deep rooted and is especially used for putting greens.

Talent alfalfa seed is selling for 38 cents per pound this year and Greece is in the market for up to 50 tons, Tucker said. The improved strain of ladino clover, growing mostly in the Sam's Valley area, is expected to bring 60 to 75 cents per pound. The common ladino clover seed last year brought about 60 cents per pound, but it is expected to sell at a slightly reduced price this year because of a large accumulated surplus.

The improved strain, the county agent said, has been highly successful here and is now being grown by three Sam's Valley area farmers as well as some in other states, including Washington and California. He said this variety is generally recognized to be superior to the common ladino clover seed.

Pletsches Return From Eastern Trip

Mr. and Mrs. John Pletsch, 18 Willamette ave., and their two children, returned this week from a month's trip to the mid-west, where they visited relatives, and where Pletsch, manager of the Jackson County Federal Savings and Loan association, transacted business.

They went by way of Yellowstone National park to Illinois and Indiana, and returned through the south and through Denver and Salt Lake City. Business conditions appear to be good wherever they went, Pletsch reported, and he said the midwestern farmers he talked to seem to feel the recently-passed farm bill is the best solution proposed so far to their problems.

There are about 80,000 known insect pests and 6,000 plant diseases in the United States.
