Local Art Show Sunday In Civic Center Park

"Greenwich Village," the annual outdoor Art show by members of the Southern Oregon Society of Artists, will be held Sunday, July 15, in Civic Center Park, Main and Holly.

Among the exhibitors showing this year will be artists who have shown in many of the local shows before, while others will be new this year. Both oils and water colors will be included in the showing.

Many to Exhibit

Mrs. Ada Andrews, who has painted four murals for local Churches of Christ, will exhibit seven of her oils. An exhibitor in local showings, she prefers to paint seascapes, landscapes, and flowers.

A commercial artist who will also show some of his oils at the show will be Hal Bishop. Mr. Bishop recently finished decorating a room in the Medford hotel.

Painting wild animals in their natural mountainous settings is A. C. Cummings' primary interest for his water colors. A first time exhibitor here, his paintings will be new to the area.

Mrs. Susie Eversizer will also enter some of her paintings this year. A former exhibitor in Rogue Valley shows, she has won several awards.

Mrs. Ethel Hixson will exhibit Sunday for the second time. Her paintings were shown in the Medford hotel last year.

A hobby of painting with water colors during the winter evenings on her farm started Mrs. Blanch Johnson on her way in the art field. Although she has only shown in Rogue Valley exhibitions, her favorite subject, horses, has given her the opportunity to paint the favorite mounts of some of the local horsemen.

Five pictures by Harry Marx will be shown at the annual outdoor art show Sunday. Mr. Marx, who had not painted for some 33 years, has done considerable painting during the last two or three years.

Dr. E. O. Muhs, president of the Southern Oregon Society of Artists, has had no formal art training. Painting only for a hobby, he will display about six pictures in the show.

A user of oils for seascapes and rivers, Mrs. Margaret Munday, will show for the first time this year. One of her pictures was chosen at the May meeting of the society to hang in Burelson's window.

Among the exhibits at the show will be nine or more oil paintings by Mrs. Elizabeth Sheffield. Mostly of landscapes of Oregon, New Mexico, and Colorado, some of these pictures were painted from 35m slides taken last summer. Mrs. Sheffield's paintings, "Wimer Covered Bridge," is now on display at Barker's Men's store. She has shown before in the Rogue Valley exhibitions and has won several awards.

Mrs. Marie Starks, who will show several of her oils and pastels here, has exhibited in Portland and New York. A winner of several awards, her favorite subjects are mountainous landscapes.

A recent winner of a ribbon in Grants Pass art show for her "Portrait of a Deer" was Mrs. Howard Wilson. A housewife, who uses her spare time to pursue painting as a hobby, she intends to exhibit seven paintings at the "Greenwich Village" show.

Victor Wrigglesworth, who majored in art at the City of London College, has painted for about 25 years. An exhibitor in local shows, he has had a one man show in the Art Center. Mr. Wrigglesworth, who paints with water colors, favors seascapes and architectural paintings.

Five or six pictures, mostly illustrations for her new book, will be exhibited by Mrs. Sarah Hardy. Trained for teaching art in the upper grades, she is a graduate of Eastern Washington College of Education.

Another exhibitor at the show will be Mrs. Gean Neece who will show several works. Secretary of the society for two years, she has had many works exhibited by the group including two "pictures-of-the-month."

The "Greenwich Village" annual outdoor Art show will be held Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The public is invited to view the paintings on display in Civic Center Park.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, a newspaper editor, a women's page editor and two newspaper writers. These consult with clergymen of all faiths and denominations. All letters are held in complete confidence.

Mrs. T. M.—Our boy has gotten in with a bad companion. Don M.—They can't dictate my friends.

Mrs. T. M.—Our son, aged 16, has recently gotten in with a boy who has a very bad influence on him. Before he met Harry, Don was always a very happy, good, hard-working boy and had never been in any sort of trouble. Since he met Harry, Don has been Moody, neglectful of his school work, is uncooperative at home and has gotten into all sorts of difficulties because of his conduct in school and outside.

The boys go out together on double dates and bring the girls home at all hours of the night and then the girl's parents complain to us. But we seem to have lost all control over him. We have spoken to Harry's parents about this, but according to them, the case is the other way around.

We've forbidden Don to go out with Harry and have cut off his allowance until he obeys, but he has gotten a part-time job and takes care of his expenses that way. We just don't know what to do.

Don M.—My parents think they can baby me forever. They can't dictate my friends. They never even tried to get to know my friend, but took an antagonistic attitude toward him from the start because we got into this trouble about bringing the girls home late. As a matter of fact this only happened once, but they have been bringing it up ever since. It's true that my school work hasn't been very good lately, but that's only because of my part-time job and the fact that I've just started going out and having good times.

The Council: These parents are losing contact with their rapidly growing and changing son and are making matters worse by using Harry as a scapegoat for all their anxieties.

The trouble that the boys have gotten into so far appears to be of a fairly minor nature and not at all unusual for their age. But the parents are apparently afraid, for some reason, of their ability to handle these problems.

Just because Don has changed in the time he has known Harry, there is no reason to assume that Harry has been a bad influence. Don has undoubtedly changed much in the past year or two and will change more. He will pick the companions that suit his needs of the moment and seem to fit in best with his new ways of thinking and feeling.

It is possible that the two boys egg one another on and make a bad combination, but this problem cannot be tackled by forcing them to see Harry. As Don says, they can't "dictate" his friends. He is too old for that and it feeds the flame of his natural adolescent rebelliousness too easily. It also widens the rift between him and his parents.

These parents must try to get to know and understand the new Don and avoid subjects which destroy confidence on both sides. They should also make an honest effort to get to know Harry and Don's other companions. When they learn to be more of a friend to Don they will more easily understand his other relationships and will be in a better position to subtly influence him when they feel he is making a mistake.

Huge Parade To End Shriner Convention

Detroit—U.P.—A huge, four-hour Shriners parade to be held tonight brings to an unofficial close the 82nd annual convention of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

The convention, which began July 8, does not formally end until Friday but Shrine officials said the convention could be considered unofficially over tonight since no formal program is scheduled for the final day of the giant get-together which brought 50,000 Shriners to the motor city.

The parade also will be the Nobles' way of honoring their new imperial potentate, Gerald Cray, 64, Deadwood, S.D. Cray was installed in the organization's highest office Wednesday.

Tudor Fair Theme of Seventh Annual Bard's Hey Day—July 22

Ashland—The Seventh Annual Bard's Hey Day sponsored by the Tudor Guild of the Oregon Shakespearean festival will be held Sunday, July 22, in the festival theatre in Ashland from 5 to 9 p.m. This annual pre-season special event will provide fun for the entire family.

This year's Hey Day centers around the Tudor Fair theme, and features Elizabethan games, entertainment, music, and contests, plus several festival displays. Contests for children include competition for the best whistler, and for the widest smile. Family games will include bowling, darts, and a fish-pond.

One of the highlights of the Elizabethan entertainment is the performing bear, accompanied by bear-master, imported by the Tudor guild especially for the fair. There will also be tumblers, acrobats, morris dancers, a juggler, magician, and a fortune teller. Members of the festival company will compete for cash prizes in the traditional pantomime contest.

Refreshments, too, will occupy much of the attention at the Tudor Fair, and will include such Elizabethan treats as pastries, Banbury tarts, and saffron bread. And, for a touch of the 20th century, there will also be coffee and soft drinks on hand.

Grand door prize at this year's Hey Day is a season membership to the festival which entitles the lucky winner to eight reserved seats for this season's plays.

Hey Day tickets may be purchased from any Tudor guild member, at the Ashland festival box office (in the theatre), from the Medford ticket agency at the First National bank, and from Lawrence's Jewelers in Medford. Admission is 50 cents. Children under ten are admitted free, when accompanied by their parents.

Hood River, Dalles Meatcutters To Strike

Portland—U.P.—Amos Buck, secretary of the Portland Meatcutters Local 143, said today that picket lines were to be set up at grocery stores in Hood River and The Dalles today after a break-down in negotiations over a new contract.

Federal Mediator George Walker planned to hold another session with both sides at 3 p.m. in The Dalles in an attempt to work out a settlement.

Union meatcutters are demanding a $91 scale for a 44 hour week, effective the first of next month and a raise to $93 for a 40 hour week next year. Meatcutters now draw $91 for a 48 hour week. The union is also demanding acceptance of its health and welfare plan.
