

Top Negotiators Renew Discussions In Steel Dispute

Pittsburgh —(U.P.)— Top negotiators for the United Steelworkers and the nation's basic steel industry sit down together at a bargaining table today for their first joint meeting since the strike began 12 days ago.

Federal Mediation Director Joseph F. Finnegan said the talks would begin at 4 p.m. (EDT) at the Hotel William Penn here. The mediator said he and his aides would participate in the session aimed at settling the contract deadlock which has idled 650,000 millworkers and up to 90,000 workers in steel-dependent industries.

Doubt Early Settlement
But mediation officials doubted the resumed negotiations would mean an early settlement. Finnegan said nothing he has heard in the past two days has changed his feeling that "this is still an extremely serious situation."

Finnegan indicated this afternoon's session would be the first of a series.

"There will have to be more meetings if this thing is going to be settled," he said. But he added no additional joint talks had been scheduled.

Industry representatives agreed to the meeting of sides after a Washington conference with Finnegan Wednesday. USW President David J. McDonald gave the union's approval Tuesday.

Cites Industry Offer

John A. Stephens, U. S. Steel Corp. vice president and chief industry negotiator, told newsmen "we have never had any reluctance to meet with the union." He said he is "hopeful that some one of these days the union will recognize the wonderful offer that's been made and accept it."

McDonald said it was "high time" for the steel industry executives "to devote themselves to the problem they have created, and enter into collective bargaining with us."

The industry has offered a five-year, no strike agreement which provides for an average annual increase of 7.3 cents an hour plus other fringe benefits spread over the term of the contract.

Union officials want a shorter contract with increased immediate gains.

The Dalles Apricot Harvest at Peak

The Dalles —(U.P.)— Trade sources here said today that the apricot harvest in The Dalles area is at its peak with processors handling between 10 and 15 tons of the fresh fruit daily.

Prices are nearly double those of a year ago, processors report, with the quantity of the harvest down somewhat but the quality of the fruit improved from a year ago.

Growers expect to complete the harvest by the end of this week.

The price boost this year was credited mainly to a poor crop in California and the routing east of apricots grown in the Yakima area.

Tigard Youth Shot By Suspicious Police

Portland—(U.P.)—Portland police early today shot and wounded a 16-year-old Tigard youth when he ran from two officers investigating his presence at a used car lot.

Hospitalized with a gunshot wound in the left thigh was Lester A. McRae. Police said the shooting occurred when officers noticed the youth shortly after midnight at the used car lot office. As they approached to question him the boy ran. Bullets stopped him several blocks away.

Chicago —(U.P.)— A lifeguard's dream came true on a Chicago beach Wednesday. A bevy of pretty models volunteered to help Chicago Park District lifeguards demonstrate rescue techniques, including the newest method of applying artificial respiration.
