BRIDGE ANYONE?

Massena, N.Y. — (U.P.) — Engineers on the St. Lawrence Seaway no longer are surprised at anything they might uncover. In sounding the south channel of the river at the downstream approach to the Grasse River Lock, engineers found a 50-foot section of bridge which apparently had fallen into the river during construction of the Roosevelt Bridge about 50 years ago.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Histaminic Headache

Some years ago, my good friend, Dr. Bayard T. Horton, of the Mayo Clinic, described an uncommon type of pain in the face which occurs almost always in men. It is so severe that when at night it hits the man he commonly jumps out of bed to try to get relief. It usually is limited to one side of the head or face, and usually it lasts less than an hour. Often it begins suddenly and ends suddenly. It tends to waken the patient an hour or two after he has gone to sleep. The pain is steady, it is excruciating, burning, or boring. It commonly involves the orbit and the temple, but it may move down as far as the neck or shoulder. The person perspires; his nose gets stuffy on the affected side, or it runs a bit. His eye on that side may become congested. Rarely is there any nausea or vomiting, as there is with migraine. The distress is so great that most of these people at some time have contemplated suicide. The disease is sometimes confused with migraine, and I have seen it in migrainous persons.

Walter Alvarez

It is sad when these persons foolishly part with a number of teeth. This does not help. Some get alcohol injections of the ganglion of the fifth nerves because even a neurologist may fail to recognize the typical story, and may suspect that the person has ticdouloureux. In six out of 10 cases the diagnosis is easy because the injection of a third of a milligram of histamine base will immediately bring an attack.

Daily Injections

The best treatment for relieving the patient of the attacks is desensitization of his body to histamine. To accomplish this, small amounts of histamine are injected each day. Unfortunately, in some cases, after the person has been relieved for a while, he may slip back into another spell, and then treatment is difficult. About 95 per cent of the patients will respond to desensitization with histamine.

To stop a spell, one can try the breathing of 100 per cent oxygen; it works in some cases. Naturally, the person must have a small tank of the gas with a reducing valve and mask ready beside his bed.

A drug which will sometimes stop a spell is dihydroergotamine, but an ampule of this drug must be injected intravenously right away. After an attack is well under way it is hard to stop it. Dr. Horton says that rectal suppositories containing ergotamine and caffeine (available in drug stores) if taken at bedtime, will often prevent an attack from coming during the night.

Women Physicians

A recent questionnaire sent out by Barnard College to 215 alumnae — women physicians — showed that three fourths of them had married, and 60 per cent of these had married physicians. The answerers all believed that a woman physician can be married, but especially when there are children to care for, the job is a big one and a most difficult one.

One woman wrote that she dropped out of medicine for 14 years to rear her family of four; and then, when they were ready to leave the nest, she went back to college and learned a specialty.

Almost uniformly, the husbands approved of the wife's continuing in medicine. However, as one woman wrote, "One needs a very understanding and adaptable husband." All husbands of a woman with big interests outside the home must be sensible enough and unselfish enough to let the wife enjoy her career. I remember when one of America's ablest women in research had promised to marry a wealthy man. A few days before the wedding when he said, "You'll now be giving up your work; you don't have to work any more; I can support you," her response was, "I cannot marry a man who knows so little about me and my life-long love of research. I am sorry, but this is the end;" and she did not marry him.

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Correspondent

Hollywood—(U.P.)—Kim Novak is in a state of utter confusion, she admitted today. She can't make up her mind between two men — a handsome American business man and a hand-kissing Italian count.

Aline Mosby

I found Kim unpacking her bags in her apartment where she moved after returning from a four-month whirl of Europe and personal appearance tour of the U.S.

The beautiful blonde left Hollywood with the promise she'd make up her mind when she came back whether to marry her faithful fiance of four years, Mack Krim.

More Confusion

Kim, however, is not exactly noted for being a woman of quick and firm decisions. Instead of making up her mind she further confused the issue by getting a crush on Count Mario Bandini.

"Mack still is number one in my life—but the count is extra special, that was no publicity story or rumor," Kim said vaguely.

"The count followed me to Paris and Venice, and he's coming to Hollywood in November, just to see me. It's hard to say what will happen. I can't predict anything."

Kim met the count at a luncheon in Rome. "Then we went to a horseshow together," she said.

"He helped me shop. And he's not one of those playboy princes. He's an engineer and very hardworking.

"I love the way European men look up to women—they put them on a pedestal. Men here don't look upon us that way. I like men to be the boss and say what to do.

"The count was so sweet. He kissed my hand. When I told him I thought that gesture was only for married women, he sid it's also done when a man has a special feeling for a woman."

The Patient Krim

Kim, in that breathless voice that makes her sound as if she's day dreaming, confessed she never got around to deciding upon the patient Krim because "I was surrounded by people all over Europe and had no time to myself. So now I am just more confused."

The actress' tour with the "Eddie Duchin Story" brought her home more of a star than when she left. When the count arrives here Kim will be starring in the story of Jeanne Eagles and settled in her new apartment, the first time she has lived alone.

I asked the ethereal Miss Novak whether Krim would tag along when she shows Hollywood to the handsome Italian count.

"I don't know," she sighed. "I'll just wait and see what happens. Mother says I'm 23 and I should get married but—I just don't know."

Thugs Take Receipts At Coos Bay Store

Coos Bay — (U.P.) — The Safeway store here was robbed Sunday night when the store manager was forced at gun point to open the safe. Week end receipts in cash, estimated at several thousand dollars, was takn.

Two men in gray hoods stepped up on either side of the car of the store's manager, Floyd Ford, when he drove into his garage about 11 p.m. The men taped Mrs. Ford, and forced Ford to get the keys to the store.

After driving to the store and having Ford open the safe, the men took only cash, left Mr. and Mrs. Ford taped in their car on a deadend street, and fled.

Mrs. Ford required hospitalization for shock following their discovery when neighbors heard her shouts for help.

FOREMEN LAUDED

New York—(U.P.)—Human effort is still the prime factor in industrial safety and the individual foreman is still the key figure to the success of any such program, according to the American Can Company, Canco, evaluating a safety program that has reduced the incidence of disabling accidents from 17.3 per million man hours worked in 1947 to 4.8 in 1955, gives the foreman the major share of the credit in promoting "increased safety awareness."
