

Gloria Swanson Speaks Up on Subject Of Impression Left by Yanks in Europe

By GLORIA SWANSON
Written for United Press
Paris—(U.P.)—Are Americans hated or loved? was the subject at a lunch in an American home overlooking the azure Mediterranean.

The discussion began as a result of Mr. Truman's comments in an interview that "Europeans love us."

It was one of the first lovely days of sunshine and since I did not share Mr. Truman's views my only interest was in feeding my eyes and my tongue on some of the best the world has to offer.

Come on Gloria get into this. What do you think? my host asked. Having been taught not to talk with my mouth full I did not answer, so he continued, "Stop dreaming and eating. You've been in Europe longer than we have, and longer than Mr. Truman has. What do you honestly think?"

Must be Respected
Swallowing hard, I said, "All right, I'll be the patsy and tell the truth I honestly believe that to be loved one must first be respected. And now may I ask who respects bolts, craggaris, or money bags, no matter from which country they come?"

The silence was frightening and rattle than listen to it I went on my putting my foot instead of my foot into my mouth.

"Certainly money has never bought a man's heart or hand, I speak of the hand as a symbol of honor. Even within an individual family it has never been known to buy love."

"Don't get personal," somebody laughed.
Change of Subject
Gladly I would have exchanged my dessert for bicarbonate of soda while the others obviously only wanted a change of subject. So being unable to leave the topic in midair I silently debated the possible reasons why we were "not loved" (Parson Mr. Truman).

I asked myself what sort of Americans traveled abroad. Maybe that would give me a clue. I seemed to remember that before and after the first war they were mostly only the very rich—the first visitors, no doubt, to give the impression that all Americans were millionaires!

Next came our "last war" soldiers. Right or wrong their salaries were more often than not larger than those of our allied officers. Our soldiers could out-spend any of them and hence was another kind of millionaire. After he left an egg no longer cost a cent and a half but 22 times as much.

More Rich Ones
Now Europe is being visited by other kinds of rich Americans. One has all kinds of letters of the alphabet attached to his office and another is a high powered salesman. Both are out to spend money by exploiting business over here, or expanding ours at home.

In either case, these Americans are trying to change the European ways of life for ours. I had always supposed that the charm of these foreign countries was the fact that "their way" was different.

As coffee was served, I decided that to think was dangerous these days because one might go crazy! So I quickly concluded that to love or hate one must know a people. And to know a people one must see them in their own environment and not just judge them by their self appointed traveling ambassadors.

Wouldn't it be unfair, I thought, if Americans had judged all the Europeans and especially the English, French, and Italians by the diplomats, spies and crooks that have come to our shores?

Workshop 'Wizard' May Become Inventor

East Lansing, Mich.—(U.P.)—Don't underestimate the neighborhood workshop wizard if he's trying to build a better mousetrap. He may build it.

One-third of all patented inventions are made by persons with no scientific or technical training, according to Dr. Jacob Schmookler, Michigan State University economist.

About 45 per cent of all inventions can be credited to persons who don't have college degrees.

Dr. Schmookler said it isn't true that all discoveries are made by subsidized expert scientists working in the laboratories of large corporations.

"But continued public belief in this erroneous view may make it true," the economist added.

Potential independent inventors may be discouraged if they believe the field is dominated by persons "hired to invent."

G. Pass, Gold Hill Men On Clover Commission

Salem—(U.P.)—Seven members of the newly authorized Ladina Clover Commission were named by Gov. Elmo Smith this week.

Willis Freeman of Madras and R. Wallace Rice of Grants Pass were appointed as members representing handlers. Members representing growers were: J. A. Macy, K. A. Harris and W. Roy Stevenson of Madras; Melvin Waldemar of Culver; and Burt Burreson of Gold Hill.

The commission was proposed earlier this year by the Jefferson Seed Growers association of Madras. It will be officially organized Aug. 3 at a Madras meeting.

More than 3½ million cars and 600,000 trucks wind up in the junkyard each year. This is so even though today's car is nearly five times as durable as its 1925 ancestor in terms of mileage.
