First Pooled News Dispatch Sent Over Federal Wires in Civil Defense Test

Editor's Note: The following is the first pooled news dispatch of the three news services, United Press, Associated Press, and International News Service, ever to be sent over federal government wires. The dispatch was sent as a test of emergency news dissemination in connection with the nationwide civil defense exercise, "Operation Alert 1956." It was sent by the northeast regional headquarters of the Federal Civil Defense Administration, simultaneously to national headquarters of that agency at Battle Creek, Mich., and to six other regional headquarters throughout the country, with a request that it be passed on immediately to the nearest bureau of the news services.

The message follows: "I am honored and privileged to be able to send a message to you in the first pooled news dispatch of the three news services, Associated Press, International News Service, and United Press, ever to be sent over federal government wires. "I understand that this is part of the national civil defense exercise, 'Operation Alert 1956.' The news item which you are now reading was transmitted by shortwave radio, telephone, and messenger from the Boston bureau of the news services to the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency and from that agency over the Federal Civil Defense Administration's special communications network to news service bureaus throughout the country.

"On the occasion of this nationwide rehearsal of civilian measures for the defense of American lives and liberty, I know that every person in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts stands with me in pledging all of our resources to the nation in any emergency. "Sincerely yours, signed Christian A. Herter."

tion's civil defense communications network might carry essential dispatches from the news services for the information of the American people.
