The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Outlook After Heart Attack

Recently, Dr. Morris M. Weiss, of Louisville, Ky., reported that a third of the patients who recover from a heart attack live at least ten years or more. Of 211 patients who survived at least two months after an acute myocardial infarction (the plugging of a small blood vessel in the heart) 60 per cent were alive at the end of five years, and 36.5 per cent were alive ten years later. Of the deaths during the first ten years 88 per cent were due to further changes in the blood vessels in the heart.

Walter Alvarez

Dr. Weiss' statistics indicate that a man who has his heart attack before he is 40 has a 62.5 per cent chance of surviving for ten years. Naturally, the man who has trouble after he is 70 is not so likely to be alive after ten years; he has a big chance of dying of old age, but even his chances are not too discouraging.

The New Psychiatry

Under the auspices of the Section of Biology of the New York Academy of Sciences, a meeting was recently held in which Dr. Jose N. R. Delgado of Yale university, described some of his remarkable experiments. After anesthetizing an animal—often a monkey—the doctor drills a tiny hole through the skull. Through this is passed a fine insulated wire which goes down into some part of the brain which the doctor wants to study. He can then either record the minute electric currents that are being formed in this area, or he can stimulate the area gently with a weak electric current.

For the benefit of antivivisectionists I will say that the tissue of the grain has no sensation, and hence the operation and the presence of the wire do not bother the monkey. This operation has been performed many times on men who did not feel pain because of it.

One of the things Dr. Delgado does is to give the animal or the man a series of either the new tranquilizing or the brain-stimulating drugs. Then, by studying the electroencephalograms obtained through the wire before and after treatment, he can get some idea as to how the drugs act. This helps chemists to make new and better drugs.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, a newspaper editor, a women's page editor and two newspaper writers. These consult with clergymen of all faiths and denominations. All letters are held in complete confidence.

MABEL — My husband spoils the children.

BOB — They're better than the neighbors'.

MABEL — How can I get my children to cooperate in the home? We have two boys and two girls, the youngest ten and the oldest 16. They seem to expect to be waited on hand and foot, and none of them is ashamed, even when there are visitors, to see my husband helping with the dishes while they do nothing.

My husband helps quite a bit and never complains, but I cannot help feeling that he must resent having to do housework after putting in a hard day at the shop. Certainly it is not fair when the children could make that unnecessary if they would put in a half hour a day.

Not only do they not help out, but they are totally irresponsible and uncooperative in their habits at home. They leave their clothes around wherever they please, they never put their laundry away in the hamper, and they will even insist on carrying food into the bedroom and never think of taking the remains away.

Whenever I try to argue with them about this, my husband either attempts to stop me or takes their side. I feel that I could bring them in line of he were to give me the slightest support. He seems to prefer making a kitchen drudge out of himself to bringing up his children the right way.

BOB — My wife has got this thing wrong. Our children see what goes on in the other homes of the neighborhood, and I must say they are far better behaved than most kids of their age in this generation. I don't want to drive them into resentment and rebellion. So many of the youngsters spend little time at home and tell their parents nothing of their private affairs. I don't want our children alienated.

They would help and cooperate if my wife were more easy-going. The trouble is that she is overworked and harassed because I can't afford any household help, and she loses patience and nags the children. Naturally, they react by being stubborn.

THE COUNCIL: Bob has not found a satisfactory solution to his wife's "nagging" or his children's failure to cooperate. He takes all the blame on himself because he is not a big earner, and he atones by punishing himself with some of the kitchen drudgery.

The children may be as basically good as Bob thinks they are, but they could easily be induced to be better. The difficulty seems to be that Bob really wants to punish himself.

For the sake of his children, as well as for his wife's sake, he should stop doing that. It would be a simple matter for him to explain, quietly and calmly, that the family needs domestic help but lacks the funds. This lack would be no great hardship if each member of the family were to undertake a limited amount of work in a cooperative, organized fashion.

Mabel "nags" because Bob is not playing the right role in this family. He would serve better as a leader and mediator than as an assistant dish washer.

Russia to Return Islands, Prisoners

London — (U.P.) — Moscow radio announced Saturday that the Soviet Union agreed at Friday's Russo-Japanese talks in Moscow to hand over Habomai and Shikotan islands to Japan.

Soviet Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov also promised to release 114 Japanese war prisoners and war criminals in the near future, according to a Tokyo report. They included 88 former military personnel, 21 civilians and five fishermen captured by the Soviet.

The return of Soviet-occupied Japanese territory has been the main stumbling block in recently renewed negotiations to end the technical state of war which still exists between the two nations.

Action Deferred on Agricultural Board

Salem — (U.P.) — The State Board of Agriculture has postponed for further study a resolution that would give it the power to appoint a state director of agriculture and change its status from an advisory to an administrative body.

The action came after the board heard reaction of some 30 farm groups at a meeting here Friday.

Most comment favored retaining the board in an advisory capacity.

The resolution to broaden the board's powers was offered by member Marshall Dana of Portland who agreed the matter should be held for furthur study by a special committee.

Final action on the proposal is expected not later than December.

Baldock Honored at Dinner in Salem

Salem — (U.P.) — More than 150 past and present state highway department employees paid tribute to resigning highway engineer R. H. Baldock at a dinner here Friday night.

A total of 324 persons attended the testimonial dinner.
