

Upper Ohio Gets Promise of Relief From Heavy Rains

Pittsburgh — (U.P.) — Weather Bureau forecasters today promised clouds but no rain in the upper Ohio Valley where flash floods and high water struck Sunday during violent thunderstorms.

The storms left at least 14 persons dead in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio. Property damage was estimated in the millions.

Families Moving Back

The first of 1,200 persons to be evacuated from nearby Canonsburg, Pa., began moving back to their homes today. Wearing from the storm, they now faced the task of cleaning up.

Hundreds of others still took shelter in emergency quarters set up by the Red Cross, Salvation Army, municipal agencies and the Army.

National Guardsmen relieved rescue-tired Canonsburg auxiliary police, volunteer firemen and civil defense workers. The water had swirled eight feet deep over key highways, bridges and residential streets, flooding wide areas and knocking many small industrial plants out of operation.

The high water posed little threat to Pittsburgh where the Ohio river crested at 24.8 feet, below flood stage, at 7 p.m. Monday. The only flooding occurred along the dock parking areas in Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle.

The Ohio river was expected to reach a 31.8 foot level near Wheeling, W. Va., about noon today. Flood stage at the Warwood Lock is 36 feet. But officials of the Wheeling Downs race track planned to cancel today's meeting should the waters rise above the expected level.

The storms, which killed nine persons in Pennsylvania, including three members of one family drowned in a flash flood near Fayette City, also caused widespread damage in neighboring West Virginia and Ohio.

Celilo Indian Dies In 80-Foot Tumble

The Dalles — (U.P.) — Alexander George, about 35, a Yakima Indian, was killed near Celilo yesterday when he fell from a railroad trestle to the rocky bank of the Columbia river, 80 feet below.

Officers said George apparently was walking across the trestle to go fishing.

Two persons saw his body on the rocks below yesterday morning and assumed he was sleeping. After noon when they returned and saw the body still in the same position they investigated and discovered George was dead.

Herter Silent on Question of Draft

Boston — (U.P.) — Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts today again left the door open for a vice presidential draft.

Asked at his news conference "would you accede to a draft" at the GOP National Convention, Herter said:

"I have said everything I am going to say on that subject."

Herter previously has refused all direct comment on the efforts of Harold E. Stassen to dump Vice President Richard M. Nixon, except to emphasize that he plans to place "my friend" Nixon's name in nomination at San Francisco late this month.

Commenting on Stassen's report that former Massachusetts Gov. Robert F. Bradford had joined the Eisenhower-Herter campaign, Herter said "I haven't seen Gov. Bradford for months."

Boy Critical After Stoppage of Heart

Marshall, Tex. — (U.P.) — A three-year-old boy whose heart stopped during a routine tonsillectomy was in critical condition but still alive today. Doctors restored his heart by opening his chest and massaging the heart.

Doctors said the youngster, Bob Brayshaw, suffered a "one-in-a-million cardiac arrest, or heart stoppage" as a reaction to the anesthesia given him for the tonsillectomy. Doctors opened his chest and massaged the heart for about five minutes before it started beating again.
