

Festival Officials In Portland For Radio, TV Tour

Portland — Angus L. Bowmer, Oregon Shakespearean Festival founder, and Dr. Margery Bailey, director of the festival's Institute of Renaissance studies, toured television and radio stations in Portland earlier this week.

Purpose of the visit was to better acquaint theater-goers of the Portland area with the festival. Don Osterman of First National Bank of Portland, coordinated the tour.

Mr. Bowmer and Dr. Bailey discussed the festival and showed a model replica of the Ashland stage, patterned after the Elizabethan stage, on Portland's KFOR-TV's "Visiting Time." During the afternoon, Mr. Bowmer was interviewed on KFOR's "Lady of the House," and Dr. Bailey appeared with Barbara Angell on KPTV's "What's Cooking" show.

Radio station KEX taped an interview between Kay West and Dr. Bailey which was broadcast the following day.

A press reception was held preceding a luncheon sponsored by the Portland Civic theater.

Wild Flower Tour Planned at Park

Oregon Federation of Garden Clubs is sponsoring the fourth annual wild flower tour at Crater Lake National park Sunday, August 12.

A picnic will be held at noon at the Rim Village. Those attending are asked to take their own picnic lunch and table service; coffee will be served by the Cascade District clubs, which are hosts for this event.

The tour will be conducted by C. W. Fairbanks, naturalist and park superintendent.

All interested persons are cordially invited.

Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. L. R. Thomas, 3-2879.

Furniture Designers Overdo Foreign Trend Says Manufacturer

Chicago — (U.P.) — One well-known furniture designer-manufacturer lashed out at his fellow manufacturers during the Merchandise Mart's recent summer home furnishings show.

"We overdo our enthusiasm for certain foreign designs and run them into the ground through over-usage," said Jens Risom, of New York. "I would like to see manufacturers experiment with design rather than just copy something and then copy one another."

Risom agreed that financial conditions make it all but impossible for small concerns, such as his own, to do much experimentation with designs.

"But the consumer now knows more than he ever did about design, designers, materials and construction," Risom said. "He requests full value for his money no matter what his income bracket may be. And he now looks for good things—not just what the store salesman wants him to buy."

Risom noted that "crazes" for unique forms of styling are necessary if we're ever to get the few very fine pieces that come with prolonged style experimentation.

"Glass and tubed furniture fit into this picture of transition," he observed.

"If we ever are to have more than a rehash of existing designs, the manufacturer must learn to trust his designer and support his creative efforts," said Risom.

TEAM FISH WITH HERBS

New York — (U.P.) — Fish and basil form a delightful flavor team. Mix 1/2 teaspoon of crumbled whole basil to 1/4 cup of butter or margarine. Use to baste fish while it is broiling.

Chic Look New For 1956 Coed

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY United Press Correspondent New York — (U.P.) — College girls, one expert says, now are more interested in looking chic than in trying to dress like their boy friends.

The 1956 coed has outgrown the flapping shirt tail, tight blue jeans and mannish neckties, the expert reports. Substitutes are bulky sweaters and sweater blouses, tight turtleneck-style pants and tieless tailored collars.

"Notice I said 'bulky,' not 'sloppy,'" the veteran buyer in one Fifth Avenue college shop said. "This year the girls like that bulky top look but not the sloppy sweater look of 15 years ago."

Any new college clothes fad spreads quickly across the nation, since the coeds themselves are consulted by stores about the clothes they want, then are hired as advisors to other girls coming in to buy their first college wardrobe.

This year the girls go for anything that has a drawing, one observer reports. That includes wool jersey blouses with drawings around the hem so the blouse can be pulled snugly down to the hips or worn loosely bloused at the waist. There also are drawstrings around knitted sweaters and silk blouses and drawstrings around brief boleros that pull in and tie around the ribs.

College girls are not interested in new style tubelike Edwardian dresses that cling to the hips and ignore the waist. They like slim princess line wool dresses, according to one designer, but the waistline has to be obvious.

More fur coats will be phony this fall, more dresses will have bolero pockets and more girls will be wearing their knees in something called bermuda kilts.

The flavor of such bland dips as sour cream or avocado is stepped up with the addition of garlic, onion or celery salt.

Old-fashioned crumb cake served with fresh or chilled canned fruit is perfect for picnics, family meals or between meal snacks. This recipe has been handed down from many a grandmother to her daughters and granddaughters. Sift together into a bowl 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon cloves and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Add and blend in 1/2 cup shortening. Reserve 1 cup of the crumbly mixture. To the remaining mixture add 1 egg, 1/4 cup molasses, 1 cup sour milk or buttermilk and 1 teaspoon soda. Mix until well blended. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Sprinkle remaining crumbs over the batter. Bake at 375 degrees about 30 minutes.
