More Subdued Colors For Auto Seat Covers

Chicago—(U.P.)—The trend is toward more subdued designs and colors in automobile seat covers and interiors.

"It's the trend because people want it that way," said Howard F. Leopold, president of Ero Manufacturing Co., a leading producer of seat covers.

"It's something like a change in women's fashions."

Leopold said automobile-makers must be keenly aware of public taste. Forecasts for 1957 passenger cars indicate that interior styling colors will be more subdued, he said.

But he added that there is one exception to the general trend. Californians still go for the louder colors and styles.

Techniques of Mass Production Evaluated

Berkeley, Calif. — (U.P.) — Studies by University of California industrial engineering professors are causing many industrial firms to re-evaluate their mass production techniques.

Conducted by Prof. Louis E. Davis, the research shows that very repetitive tasks are boring to most people and the overloading of payrolls with assembly-line specialists is hurting morale and production efficiency.

Under a new system of "job design" or "job enlargement" in which each worker builds the entire product, it was found in at least one instance that quality output and morale went up.

Volkswagen Sales Cutting Into Field Of Foreign Car Market in United States

New York—(U.P.)—Car manufacturers were in fierce competition for sales in 1952 when a beetle-like little German car went on display in New York and drew immediate attention from American car buyers.

The tiny runabouts with the name "Volkswagen" (People's Car) siphoned off sales from American built cars with claims of economy (price from $1,495 up), low operating cost (35 to 40 miles to a gallon of gasoline), and ease of parking.

Workmanship Claimed Superior

Volkswagen backed the foreign car competition by calling attention to its 36 horsepower air cooled engine-in-the-rear, its custom made features, and claims of superior German workmanship.

It began to eat into the sales of such favorite foreign cars as the sporty Jaguar and the trim MG which had been selling at the rate of 12,000 to 14,000 a year, with most sales concentrated on the East Coast.

Within two years the demand for Volkswagens encouraged its West German manufacturers to build a national distribution service. By 1955 there were 360 franchised dealers operating from coast to coast and Volkswagen sales were better than ever. The company had cornered 60 per cent of the foreign car market and sold 33,000 passenger automobiles last year. At the same time the sale of other

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Twenty-three years ago I laughed and got a job—I've been with Jack Benny ever since.

I was working in the East as a sportscaster and had the good fortune to be included in a general audition for the Jack Benny program. Jack, as part of the audition, kidded the boxtop craze by inviting his listeners to tear by toping their automobiles and mail them in.

I was convulsed and my voice, trained to project over the roars of football crowds, carried to the microphones. I've been laughing with and at Jack from that time 'til now.

'Boo-boos' Turned About

I'm fortunate to have been associated with a star with a real sense of humor who appreciates the "fluff" or "boo-boo" because I've contributed more than my share. Jack and his writers have been wise enough to turn mistakes on the show to advantage.

For example, when can forget Mary Livingston's "Chiss Sweet Sandwich" or her car which was at the filling station on the "Grass Reek."

Once I signed off one of the CBS-TV shows with a distortion of the sponsor's pet slogan. It came out "Be Lucky, Go Happy." Jack promptly assigned my wife, Lois, the announcing chores for the following three weeks—to my distress and Lois' delight.

Equipment Moved Backstage

Contrary to many shows, the equipment on the Benny TV show is located behind the stage with only the microphone booms on the stage. This is done so the audience can have a clear view of the players. Three cameras are used. One on the left is for long shots, one on the right for medium shots and one in the middle for closeups.

This camera in the middle is a favorite of Jack's. We have a joke that it's one of a kind and CBS uses it only on the Benny show. It has a special device that "makes a 62-year-old man look 39."
