Girl Scout Camp Director Clarifies Hiking Incident

(Editor's note: The following story is printed at the request of Girl Scout officials, who have said earlier press association reports of the event were inaccurate. It was obtained from reliable sources, but illustrates the frequently difficult job of obtaining an accurate story, for members of the Girl Scout movement are still not entirely in agreement as to just what happened, although they agree on the general sequence of events.)

Miss Irene Knox, director of Low Echo, Medford Girl Scout camp at Lake of the Woods, said this week end that Girl Scouts just don't forget members of their hiking parties.

Miss Knox made the statement in reporting details of a hiking incident last week in which a 43-year-old Hilliard, Ohio, counselor spent Monday night alone on Mt. McLoughlin after becoming separated from three others.

An early report of the incident, originating in Klamath Falls, erroneously said the counselor, Mrs. Carrie Kidwell, was forgotten by other members of the party who were proceeding down the mountain with a girl who had become ill. Miss Knox stated:

Story Told
The director said, "The whole thing began when Sandra Ullian of Grants Pass, one of the hikers, was stung by a bee. She told the rest of the party she had an allergy to bee stings and had previously experienced serious physical effects from them.

"We decided it was best to begin taking her back to the camp immediately rather than waiting to see if she would recover. Miss Jackie Callan, Medford, Delores Schleichert, Eugene, and Carol Sellstrom, Yreka, all experienced hikers, started to assist the sick girl down the mountain. Mrs. Kidwell, also an experienced hiker, accompanied them while Miss Ann Denman, unit leader from Medford, and Miss Janet Perry, a counselor also from Medford, went to the ranger station for help.

Miss Knox said Mrs. Kidwell had discarded her jacket along the way and wanted to leave the group for a few minutes to pick it up.
"The others asked her not to leave, but she said she was familiar with the area and would join them later.
Physician Called
"Meanwhile, a forest ranger called a Klamath Falls physician who prescribed adrenalin. The ranger also has an allergy to bee stings and had on hand a kit complete with adrenalin. When the camp nurse arrived, she administered the medication on the spot and Sandra responded within minutes."
The director emphasized that Sandra was treated on the spot—not later in Grants Pass as the earlier report stated—and medication was administered under direction of a physician. Sandra was later taken to her home, where her own doctor was summoned. A check the next morning indicated her condition was fine, Miss Knox said, adding that on-the-spot treatment may have saved her life.
"After Mrs. Kidwell failed to rejoin Miss Denman, Miss Perry and the sick girl within a reasonable time, they realized

4-H Club News

Antelope Livestock Club

The monthly meeting of the Antelope 4-H Livestock Club was held at the John Bohnert home Aug. 10, at 7:30 p.m. Before the meeting the members judged a class of hereford cows and Doreen Bohnert showed the new members how to fit a beef animal for the county fair, Aug. 22, 23, 24 and 25.

During the meeting Bill Bigham said that each member is to have his animals at the fair by 10 p.m. Aug. 21. Straw will be furnished but each person is to bring his own hay. Next meeting will be held at the Antelope schoolhouse on Sept. 14.

On the food committee for the next meeting are Elbert Bigham, Leonard Freeman and the Bohnerts. After the meeting refreshments were served.

Jackson Co. 4-H Club Council

The regular meeting of the Jackson County 4-H Club council was held Aug. 13. Nominations for officers were held. Those nominated were, for president, Dale Smith and David Woolfolk; vice president, Charles Elmore and Nyla Murray; secretary, Cathy Carroll and Carolyn Tieg; treasurer, Truman Elmore, Phillip Krouse, and Carol Mann; and reporter, Sheila Couey.

It was decided that the teenagers would help with the style review and award night program. Those working on the style review are, chairman, Marjo Murray, and Linda Malloroy. Francis and Phillip Krouse, Charles and Truman Elmore, Norman Ditsworth, and Carolyn Tieg are on the award night committee.

Before the business meeting the council members completed painting the road signs and prepared the fair premium books for mailing.

Counselor Falls

Miss Knox explained that Mrs. Kidwell had slipped in a shale area and fallen down a bank. She was "shaken up" but otherwise uninjured. She scrambled back up the bank but, though she was well acquainted with the area, she became confused and couldn't find the rest of the party.
"Before dark she found a clearing and made a strong bough bed," Miss Knox said. "She went to sleep and was awakened only a few times by ants. In the morning she oriented herself and proceeded to a place which had previously been designated as the point where the group would be picked up by car.

"I saw her first and, believe me, I've never been so glad to see anyone. I just had a feeling she would be there. Carrie was tired and very thirsty, but otherwise all right. She stayed in one place as any experienced hiker does when becoming lost. She did not wander around all night as was previously reported."
