

Motion Filed to Dismiss Complaint

Portland—(U.P.)—A motion challenging the legality of the present Multnomah county grand jury was filed here Friday by Attorney James M. Hafey. The motion, if granted by the court, could upset pending grand jury action on many criminal indictments and nullify the vice and corruption indictments returned recently.

Hafey asked for dismissal of a criminal complaint against his client. He based his move on three points which included a charge that the present or succeeding grand juries cannot return valid indictments because the 1956 jury list was not selected from both the assessment rolls and voter registration rolls from all parts of the county in proportion to all qualified jurors appearing on those two rolls as required by statute.

He also said the June 1956 grand jurors were not examined individually by the jury commissioner and that prospective jurors were excused by persons other than the presiding judge. Howard R. Loneragan, chief criminal deputy district attorney, filed a cross motion asking the court to set all pending cases over to the September grand jury. He said the motion would be litigated before any more cases are presented.

County Clerk St. Cohn said the voter list only is used because it is a much more satisfactory list to work from. He added, "The law, so far as I know, reads that the jury list can come either from the taxpayers or from the registered voters, or both."

Tooze, Walker Said In Fair Condition

Salem—(U.P.)—Two Oregon judges were reported in fair condition in Salem Memorial hospital today.

Justice Walter L. Tooze of the State Supreme Court and Circuit Judge Arlie Walker of McMinnville are both receiving treatment for heart ailments.

Judge Walker was stricken while attending a Kiwanis convention here last Monday, and Justice Tooze was received at the hospital about two weeks ago.

Photographer Beaten By British Actress, Husband at Party

Beverly Hills—(U.P.)—Diana Dors, England's blonde bombshell version of Marilyn Monroe, exploded Sunday night in a savage attack on a United Press photographer covering a lavish filmland party at her $175,000 estate.

The British actress joined her husband, Dennis Hamilton, in a wild, kicking, hitting attack on photographer Stewart Sawyer, 32, who they accused of pushing them and two others into a swimming pool.

Acted Like Tiger

Witnesses said Hamilton acted "like a tiger" as he knocked Sawyer to the ground and sat on him, beating his bloody face while Miss Dors screamed "unprintable words" and kicked at the photographer's head.

Sawyer was carried from the side of the pool, unconscious and bleeding after guests pulled the enraged husband away. Sawyer reportedly suffered a broken nose and bruises on his head, face and ribs.

When he regained consciousness, Sawyer denied pushing the actress, Hamilton, agent Louis Shurr and wardrobe designer Howard Shoup into the pool.

The mild-mannered photographer was to undergo a medical examination later today. His wife Jan, said his nose was "puffed up like a balloon."

"He definitely was hit from behind," she said. "He's got a lump on his back. He also was injured on his forehead and cheek. He's been badly beaten."

To Depend on Results

Mrs. Sawyer said the possibility of any legal action would depend on results of the medical examination. "My husband has no plans right now for anything except getting some rest and then seeing his doctor," she said.

Sawyer said he was a bystander in the episode.

"I did not push them into the pool nor do I remember anything except both Miss Dors and her husband attacking me," Sawyer said.

Hamilton, a former professional fighter, said after he had changed into dry clothes, "I haven't given this man (Sawyer) my calling card yet. This man hasn't been dealt with yet."
