Pebble Beach, Calif. — (U.P.) — Barking sea lions, foggy weather and erratic iron shots combined Saturday to give President Eisenhower a hard time of it on the golf course.

The chief executive summed up his feelings as he hit his first drive high in the air from the first tee of the Cypress Point course beside the Pacific ocean. "That," said the President, "was a louse."

Embarking on his second full 18-hole round since his June 9 illness operation, the chief executive took a two-over-par six on the 420-yard first hole. What he did after that was a national secret because Secret Service agents shooed reporters and photographers from the course after Mr. Eisenhower completed the first hole.

Stood Play Well

The chief executive played with Norman Chandler, president of the Los Angeles Times-Mirror Co.; Berry Leithard, president of the Cluett Peabody Co. and one of the President's golfing pals at the Augusta (Ga.) National Golf club, and Charles S. Jones of Los Angeles, president of the Richfield Oil Co.

Mr. Eisenhower's doctor, Maj. Gen. Howard Mcc. Snyder, said the chief executive stood up well under his first round which he played yesterday.

"He's looking right as far as I can see," Snyder said. "He came in without being fatigued after 18 holes Friday and that is all right."

The President looked sleepy-eyed as he emerged from the residential section of the Cypress Point clubhouse shortly after 9 a.m. While waiting for his foursome to assemble, he hit a number of practice shots while his caddy, Turk Archdeacon, retrieved the balls.

As the President tried a number of different clubs, he kept up a running commentary on his golf and the local surroundings. At one point, he stretched out his arms and said to his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, "one day like this and you're full of joints."

Sea Lions Chatter

On the rocks offshore sea lions kept up a noisy chatter and a light mist, known locally as "high fog," drifted down on the chief executive who wore a buff-colored cap, two-tone tan sports shirt, a tan sweater and slacks.

"Did you notice," he said to Hagerty, "how the sea lions bark when you start to hit?"

The President's game was so bad Friday that he could laugh about it Saturday.

"I hit a ball into a tree Friday on the 17th hole and it never came down," he said. "The caddy took one look and just got out another ball and dropped it down."

He also recalled somewhat ruefully that on the eighth hole Friday, he tried repeatedly with-

Nixon Planning Sunday Trip To Washington, D. C.

Los Angeles — (U.P.) — Vice President Richard Nixon, heartened by the improved condition of his ailing 77-year-old father, is making tentative plans today for an early departure to Washington, D.C., to map his forthcoming political campaign as President Eisenhower's running-mate.

The vice president said he probably would leave for the nation's capital early Sunday if the early morning medical report on his father, Frank Nixon, continues to be favorable.

Appears More Relaxed

Nixon appeared cheered and more relaxed Friday when his gray-haired father, who was stricken last Wednesday with a hemorrhaging artery in the abdomen, was removed from the critical list. However, the elder Nixon's condition still is listed as "serious."

The vice president met with southern California Republican leaders in a secret campaign strategy meeting here Saturday. Further conferences are scheduled in Washington Monday, depending upon whether Nixon is able to fly east today.

Nixon left the Republican national convention in San Francisco and rushed to his parent's home in the suburb of nearby La Habra when the elder Nixon first was stricken. He left his father's bedside to make his nomination acceptance speech at the convention, but returned here to maintain his vigil.

out success to get out of a sand-trap and finally gave up. His partners said he shot in "the neighborhood" of 92, but more likely, he was over 100.

McKay Holds High Republican Hopes

Portland — (U.P.) — Douglas McKay, former secretary of interior who is seeking the Senate seat held by Democrat Wayne Morse, arrived from the Republican national convention Friday with words of praise for the GOP ticket and hopes for election of a Republican congress.

McKay, who faces the toughest battle of his long political career in trying to unseat the former Republican called the Eisenhower-Nixon team "great."

"It couldn't be better," he said.

McKay said that in Oregon "we are faced with a two-pronged referendum on President Eisenhower. We must not only reelect Ike and Dick; we must also elect a Republican Congress. Only with the support of a Republican congress can they do the whole job for all the people, and continue the great work that has been started over the past three and one-half years."

Ragweed Pollen Noted at Portland

Portland — (U.P.) — The Oregon state board of health has reported that for the first time this year pollen grains "strongly resembling" ragweed have been detected in the air over downtown Portland.

Dr. Harold M. Erickson, state health officer, emphasized that the number of grains is too small to cause any symptoms among hayfever or asthma victims, but he said the report "should again serve as a warning that ragweed has invaded Oregon and can become a serious health problem unless prompt and positive eradication measures are taken."

Although no information was available as to the source of the suspected ragweed pollen, the plant is known to have gained a foothold in several Oregon counties in recent years. A control act was passed by the 1953 session of the state legislature, but no funds have ever been authorized to make the program operative.

Delaware Democrat Says Federal Tax Reduction Possible

Washington — (U.P.) — Sen. J. Allen Frear, Jr., (D-Del.) said Saturday that congress can and should cut taxes next year.

Frear, a member of both the Senate's Tax - Writing Finance committee and Banking committee advocated a reduction in personal income taxes as a means of achieving full employment and raising purchasing power.

These views are counter to those expressed earlier by Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) Finance committee chairman. Byrd cautioned that a tax cut in the near future would be dangerous because the government is on a "spending spree."

Cut for Working People

Frear told reporters "I think it is possible to cut taxes next year. We can give the working people a reduction."

He said a tax cut would put more money in circulation and thus "keep the purchasing power high" and create more jobs.

"The purchasing power of the dollar has been reduced, regardless of what was said at the Republican National convention in San Francisco last week," Frear said. "The dollar is rapidly becoming unstabilized."

Can Create Employment

"Full employment is the answer. I believe we can create it by reducing personal income taxes, either through a rate cut or a boost in exemptions."

The government Friday reported the cost of living at an all time high.

The Democratic party platform specifically pledged to increase individual income tax exemptions from $600 to $800. The platform adopted by Republicans promised tax cuts if the federal budget is balanced.

Several Seek To Quash Indictments

Portland — (U.P.) — Several persons indicted by the recent vice-probing grand jury in Portland have filed motions in court to set aside the indictments returned against them.

Included in the group filing motions asking to have the indictments set aside were William Goebel, charged with extortion and conspiracy, Coin Machine men of Oregon, extortion; Marie Maynard, setting up a house of ill fame; Stanley G. Terry, conspiracy and destroying corporation records; and Alvin J. Brown, destruction of corporation records.

In other action Friday, the court appointed Bruce Spaulding as attorney for Thomas E. Maloney, Seattle, charged with conspiracy, and gave Maloney until 2 p.m. Tuesday to answer the charge.

Joseph P. McLaughlin, Seattle was given until 2 p.m. next Friday to plead to indictments of bootlegging, extortion and conspiracy.

Raymond Clark and his wife, Virginia, pleaded innocent to an indictment charging them with setting up a house of ill fame.

The Puritans attached considerable importance to beer as an item in their provision stores. Collier's Encyclopedia says, John Alden was signed on by the Pilgrim party to act as the colony's cooper.
