The Painful Hip of Children

In a recent article in the Journal of Pediatrics, Drs. Norman J. Rosenberg and Earl E. Smith, of Cleveland, discussed the painful hip of children. The trouble is generally due to transient synovitis, or inflammation of the lining of the joint. The cause is not known. The condition tends to clear up by itself, and hence there is no reason for great alarm. However, the child should have an x-ray study made by an expert to be sure that no other more serious disease is present.

Usually there is a vague ache which causes a slight limp, or some pain at night. Rarely there is a little fever. The child may lie with the thigh on the affected side pulled up toward his abdomen. There may be some tenderness of the tissues around the joint. X-ray studies will show no change in the bones. About all that can be done is to keep the child at rest. When

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. J.J.M.—I've invested my years in this house.

L.J.M.—It's already served its purpose.

Mrs. J.J.M.—Ten years ago, we acquired a fine house, which was really too much for our means. We have, nevertheless, managed to hold onto it, to make improvements and to furnish it well. We have made many sacrifices to build and maintain this home, and it has come to mean a great deal to me, although it was my husband who was most eager to have it in the early days.

Now that it is in good shape, with the children grown up, no longer too much of a strain on me to manage it, my husband wants to get rid of it. I feel that it would be a calamity to do so.

Ten years ago, I would have been much happier with a small and modest home. That would have enabled me to be interested in some things outside the house, and it might have left us some money for vacations and other activities. As it is, I have invested all my time, energy, and interest in this home, and we have deprived ourselves of resort vacations and trips because we had such a fine and costly home.

Much as I was against it at the beginning, I now feel very much attached to this house. I want to keep it in the hope that, even if we cannot afford to keep it as a family homestead to which the children can return and bring their children for visits, one of them may some day be able to live in it.

L.J.M.—Perhaps I was too ambitious at the outset when we bought this house, but I wanted to give my children the kind of home I had dreamed of as a child. I think the home has served its purpose, and I think my wife's present attitude is impractical.

The children will have interests that will take them away from us. The boy is in the Army, the older girl is in college, and the younger complains that there is not enough social life in this community.

We can get a good price now, and we may find ourselves selling it cheap if we hold on too long. I'm afraid the house may separate us from our children, instead of keeping them closer to us, since they will feel the tug of interests elsewhere.

The Council—The husband's reasoning may be sound, but he seems premature. The boy in the Army and the girl in college may appreciate this home more than ever because of their enforced absences. It will be time enough to decide on selling the house when they have made their plans for the future.

As for the real estate market, there is obviously the element of gamble in either selling or holding onto the house. On the one hand, there has been so much building that there is some basis for fearing a decline in prices. On the other hand, costs still are rising, the standard of living seems destined to continue to rise, and the prospect for a firm real estate market seems about as strong as the prospect for a soft market.

Family Escapes Hurts In Forced Landing

La Puente, Calif. — (U.P.) — A young San Diego couple and their three sons escaped death or serious injury last night when they made an emergency landing in their private plane in a vacant field near here after becoming lost in a high fog, sheriff's deputies reported.

The pilot was identified as Robert D. Loscher, 32, San Diego, who told deputies that after becoming lost in the fog and since he had a license for daylight flight only, he landed at about 7:45 p.m. in the "largest field" he could find.

With him were his wife, Mary Louise, and their three sons. No injuries were reported.

Mile-High Building Said on Drawing Board

Spring Green, Wis. — (U.P.) — Architect Frank Lloyd Wright said Saturday he is working on plans for a proposed mile-high Illinois state office building for Chicago—five times as high as the Empire State building.

Wright said the building now is only in the drawing board stage but he is convinced it can be built so it would have less oscillation than the Empire State building and it would be a "Miracle of Economy."

JAIL ART

Mt. Pleasant, Mich. — (U.P.) — The art on a jailhouse wall can be pretty grim—but at Mount Pleasant jail they could put the cell walls on exhibition. Using only a pencil, prisoner Frank Shawano, a Chippewa Indian, completed detailed, shaded drawing of a tiger, mountain lion and bear in three hours. "I've seen pictures of animals on posters," Shawano explained. "Drawing is my pastime."

Worry of FALSE TEETH

Slipping or Irritating?

Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, talk or laugh. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your teeth. This pleasant powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gum, no gooey, sticky taste or feeling. It's alkaline (non-acid). Get FASTEETH at any drug counter.

DON IS FIRST — Dodger pitching ace Don Newcombe (above) became the major leagues' first 20-game winner of the year when he was credited with the win over the Redlegs in Brooklyn. Score was 6-5. Newcombe stands good chance to become Brooklyn's biggest winner in 32 years.
