

Tax Reductions Effective Tonight

Washington—UPI—Two tax reductions go into effect at midnight tonight, but the general public probably won't notice them a bit.

One increases the tax-free minimum on amusement admission tickets and the other raises the tax exemption on short haul transportation tickets.

In all the cuts will mean a loss to the treasury of revenue estimated at some $66 million annually.

The amusement tax decrease was designed principally to help motion picture theatres. It means that on admission tickets of 90 cents or less there will be no 10 per cent federal tax collected. Until now and since 1934, the tax-free minimum has been 50 cents.

However, no lowering of movie prices is expected. The tax cut, like a similar one in 1934, is aimed at helping theater operators, particularly those in small towns and neighborhoods, to cushion their falling incomes, which have been increasingly depressed since the coming of television.

Hodge Aides Wait Start of Terms

Chicago—UPI—Two key associates of deposed and convicted State Auditor Orville E. Hodge, who engineered a $1-million embezzlement of state funds, entered a new phase of their lives today.

Edward A. Hintz, an ex-president of a Chicago bank who cashed phony checks for Hodge, was to appear in federal court and begin a three-to-five year sentence for misappropriation of about $400,000 in federally insured bank funds.

Edward A. Epping, former office manager of the disgraced auditor, was to be sentenced after pleading guilty before federal Judge J. Sam Perry on similar charges.

Hodge, who masterminded the fraudulent check scheme to cheat the state treasury and maintain his "high living" was sentenced last week to 12-15 years in state prison and was placed in Menard penitentiary.
