Bomb Scare Chases Oakland Employees

Oakland, Calif. — (UP) — A "dynamite bomb" planted in the foyer of the Oakland City Hall caused the evacuation of 50 employees Saturday while 2000 curious passersby watched tensely from a distance — but the bomb proved to be only an expertly-fashioned phoney.

Meanwhile, across the bay near San Francisco's Hunters Point housing project, police found a highly explosive aerial bomb that turned out to be the real thing.

A janitor, Nelson Davis, discovered what appeared to be five sticks of dynamite, wrapped in red cellophane and connected by wires to a battery in the foyer of the building.

Police immediately blocked off 14th street in front of the City Hall and put in quick phone calls to Police Chief Wyman W. Vernon and an Army demolition team from the San Francisco Presidio.

Some 50 persons, mostly police clerks, were cleared out.
