Clothes Designed By San Franciscan Are Just Dresses

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Correspondent

New York—UPI—A fashion show can make an average female feel like the forgotten woman.

Who is as thin as those models anyway? What budget leaves room for a Dior, or even a first rate copy? What lady is fair enough to look good in a dress that hangs straight down from the midriff?

Well, step up and meet a dress designer who not only understands the feeling, but manages to stage a fashion show that would be considered a fiasco by Paris standards.

The name is Eleanor Green, a San Francisco mother of three children and designer of cocktail dresses. She is a trim blonde with a Hungarian accent and a sense of humor.

"I don't design creations," she said nonchalantly just before her first New York fashion show began. "I make dresses. I think they should do something to enhance a woman's body, that's all."

Models Too Thin

The first model walked into the hotel suite parlor in a mocha and black silk print dress. It was a size 10, but the willowy model didn't fill it out. The next two models appeared in too-tight dresses.

Miss Green shrugged. "These dresses are from the regular stock and these girls are too thin," she said. "Would you believe it, one of the models is wearing hip pads!"

The girl with the hip falsies blushed. It was true, she whispered later, although she was unprepared for Miss Green's public announcement.

"Someone asked the price of a handsome silver grey brocade dress which Miss Green showed in a group called 'Career Girl at the Opera.' The designer began to apologize.

Highest Price $40

"I don't like to say the price sometimes, because the people think something maybe is wrong with the clothes," she said. Turned out that her most expensive dress costs less than $40 in stores, but she suffers from a widespread tendency to be suspicious of bargains.

So why doesn't she design more expensive clothes? "I don't have the patience for the finer details," Miss Green said bluntly. "I know what lines are flattering to women and I use good materials. But I have no desire to try to manufacture the kind of dress that would sell for much money."

Miss Green, who designs, makes samples, manufactures and sells her own San Francisco-made clothes, does keep an eye

Gambee-Boitano Rites Saturday

The wedding of Miss Shirley Boitano to Eugene Gambee of Portland is set for Saturday at Sacred Heart Catholic church here, and friends and relatives of the couple coming from a distance are now arriving in the city.

Mr. Gambee arrived the first week and his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Louis Gambee, Portland, are expected today. Also arriving with the Gambees will be the bridegroom's aunt, Miss Elizabeth Canning, who makes her home with the Gambees.

Miss Annie Rollins, Tacoma, who will be a bridesmaid, has arrived and is a guest of Miss Sylvia McCabe at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McCabe, and Miss Jane Phillips, Seattle, who formerly lived here. A guest of Miss Nancy McKinstry and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. McKinstry, Miss Phillips will also be a bridesmaid at the wedding.

Two parties were given for Miss Boitano in recent weeks. Her cousin, Mrs. Robert Fasel, gave an "absentee" shower for the bride-to-be shortly before she arrived home from Europe where she spent the summer weeks. The party was at the home of Mrs. Fasel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bottjer, 3330 Jacksonville highway, and was held in the patio. Fourteen guests attended.

After Miss Boitano's return home she was honored at a party given by Miss Sharon Hogan and her mother, Mrs. M. N. Hogan, at the family home on Siskiyou court. Guests were Miss Boitano and her mother, Mrs. Anthony Boitano, Miss Isabel Carr, Miss Sylvia McCabe, Mrs. James Shinn, Miss Carol Bates, whose wedding to Dean Gaily took place soon afterwards, and Miss McKinstry.

The Gambee-Boitano rites are set for Saturday morning with a noon reception to follow at Rogue Valley Country club.

on what expensive Parisian designers are doing.

"Everything becomes popular if it is promoted in Paris enough," she said with resignation. "It takes a little time to simmer down to my clothes. But now Paris says skirts will be longer, so I know that in a few seasons I will be making my skirts longer. I don't think it will be a drastic change. It will happen gradually enough so clothes won't have to be thrown away."

DeJarnett's Home From Trip East

Mr. and Mrs. Otto DeJarnett, 618 West Jackson st., returned home this week after taking Mrs. DeJarnett's son, Charles Cooky, to Annapolis Naval academy in Baltimore, Md., where he is a second year student.

Mr. Cooky spent a month in Medford after completing a summer cruise to Europe as an assignment from the Navy.

En route to Maryland, the DeJarnetts and Mr. Cooky visited Yosemite National park. They also visited Mr. DeJarnett's stepson, William Purdin, in Denver, the home of Presidents Monroe and Jefferson, site of the battle of Fredricksburg and the Capitol at Washington, D. C.

On the return trip, Mr. and Mrs. DeJarnett visited Yellowstone park. They made the entire trip by car.

Lemon Tuna Tarts Delightful Recipe

New York—UPI—Tuna salad, one of the basics of many a homemaker's menus, comes to the table in delightful new guise in this recipe for lemon tuna tarts. Here's how:

Sift together 1½ cups of enriched flour and 1 teaspoon of salt.

Cut in 2/3 cup of shortening until the mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in ½ cup rolled oats (quick or old-fashioned, uncooked) and the grated rind of 1 lemon. Sprinkle with 5 to 7 tablespoons of lemon juice, mixing lightly with a fork until all is moistened. Shape the pastry into a ball and let rest 5 minutes.

Roll out pastry and cut into 4 inch squares. Shape each square on the outside of a custard cup, pleating the edges to make small tarts. Prick the crust before baking in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 10 to 15 minutes. When cool, fill with your favorite tuna salad and garnish with a lemon slice.

Institute Sponsored By Council

A well attended Mission Institute, sponsored by Medford Council of Church Women, was held in the Church of the Brethren September 7. Mrs. C. A. Stothers, chairman, presided. The Institute is designed to assist the affiliated Protestant churches of the council in choosing study books for the fall and winter months. On display were the suggested books, maps and other materials for adult and children's groups.

Opening the all-day session was the Rev. John Bright of St. Mark's Episcopal church, who gave the morning devotions. Mrs. Allen Whitehead was pianist for the service.

Briefing the books were Mrs. I. Eltreim, Mrs. A. C. Cummings, Mrs. Wayne Troxell, Mrs. Arnold Bohnert, Mrs. A. Earhart, Mrs. Ward Lampkin, Mrs. Bert Elliott, Mrs. D. K. West, Mrs. Wilma Root, Mrs. George Flanagan, Miss Anna Streed and Mrs. Grover Corum.

The president, Mrs. J. C. Sparks, presented several matters which were discussed and acted upon. Important among these was a decision to help promote a drive in the city for 10,000 pounds of warm clothing for overseas. It was suggested that those having warm garments left from their rummage sales contact officers of the council for pickup. Information from World Service Center states that the need is very great since supplies are depleted in the storage rooms at present. The drive for clothing will continue through September and part of October. It is hoped to ship materials not later than October 10.

A fellowship hour was enjoyed about the luncheon tables where women of the hostess church served. The Rev. Escl Heiser, host pastor, gave the table devotions.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. Harlan P. Bosworth Jr., conducted work shops covering problems of religion, health and education, and rehabilitation of the American Indian. Assisting her were Mrs. William Ardry and Mrs. Kenneth Newland.

Concern for the 400,000 American Indian people, and more especially for the Klamath Indian people, is to continue on the program of the local council, it was stated. Both a study and action program will be continued.

PINEAPPLE SAUCE TOPPING

New York—UPI—Fresh pineapple sauce makes the perfect topping for ice cream, cake or pudding desserts. Combine ½ cup sugar and 2 teaspoons of cornstarch in a saucepan. Stir in ¾ cup of water and a dash of salt. Cook over medium heat until the syrup is clear and transparent, stirring constantly. Add 1 cup of shredded fresh pineapple and 4 teaspoons of lemon juice. Cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from the heat and stir in 1 teaspoon of pure vanilla extract. Serve warm or cold. Yield, 1 cup.

Spike glasses of fresh grapefruit juice or lemonade with slices of fresh peaches for a summertime treat.

"Clean Plate Club" Is Help to Children

Manhattan, Kan.—UPI—Good habits of food selection can be developed in children with a little parental ingenuity says Beulah Westerman, of the Kansas State college department of foods and nutrition.

Dr. Westerman suggests forming a "Clean Plate Club" in homes where there are several children. A poster of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt holding a large clean plate will remind the children of good food habits, she says. If a child feeds his plate at a meal, his name goes on the plate and he is a member of the "Club." If he fails to do this, his name is removed.

for by the Indian affair committee, which Mrs. Bosworth heads, and she will be assisted by Mrs. Ardry, Mrs. Newland and Mrs. William Deatheridge.

They will make resource material available to every church or community grouping wishing it.

The council voted to send Mrs. Bosworth and Mrs. Ardry, or her alternate, Mrs. Newland, as delegates to the state wide workshop on the termination problems of the Klamath Indians to be held in Salem September 27. The Oregon council of churches and the anthropology department of Willamette university are prepared to discuss the misunderstandings of Public Law 387 and the Christian attitude toward the termination problems. Many specialists and Indian people are expected to attend the workshop.

Dr. and Mrs. Bert Elliott closed the afternoon by showing pictures of Southeast Asia and telling of their experiences while traveling in that section. Much of the fall study of Protestant churches will center about Asia and nearby territory.

Representatives and officers of the council were reminded that the first Monday in October will be the date for a business session set for 1 p.m. in the Methodist church parlors.

Simple Designs Rule For New Furniture

Chicago—UPI—It is increasingly difficult to make a mistake in furniture buying, say some home furnishings sources.

Gone from the scene are the heavily ornamented pieces of past decades which so often turned into king-sized "lemons" as soon as they were placed in the home.

Straight lines and simple designs have become the rule.

"Buyers want casualness above everything else," said Ben Muller, sales manager of the Imperial Furniture Co., Inc., Grand Rapids, Mich.

"The trend is toward a mixture of old traditional with new ultramodern. It produces something of a transitional style," Muller said at the summer home furnishings market.

Buyers also are selecting a better line of furniture, according to market reports.

"Newspapers and magazines have educated the average buyer so that he or she knows the difference between fine styling and cheap ornamentation," said Lawrence H. Whiting, Furniture Mart president. "So the manufacturers just have to fall in line and produce the type of thing the buyer wants. It's made for a high level in all furniture styling."
