Sleeker, Glassier Looke in Cars Will Cost $1 Billion

By LEE LINDBERG
 United Press Correspondent
 Detroit —(U.P.)—It cost the nation's auto-makers about $1 billion to restyle the longer, lower, sleeker and "glassier" 1937 cars which soon will appear on highways from coast to coast.
 The men who run the industry feel the huge expense is anything but money poured down the drain. They are confident the new models will touch off a buying spree making 1937 second only to record 1935 in sales.
 This is the year for the big style change for most companies. Only a scattering of makes are in for just the so-called "face-lifting" — Packard, Hudson, Nash, Studebaker and Rambler. Even so, Studebaker bills its new cars as "incorporating a number of styling and engineering advances."
Biggest Changes
 The biggest changes for '37 will show up on models turned out by the highly competitive "big three"—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.
 Chrysler President L. L. Colbert says the new Plymouth, Dodge, DeSoto, Chrysler and Imperial cars have been restyled "from wheels to roof."
 "This includes new suspension and other engineering and styling changes exceeding anything we have accomplished in any one year," Colbert says.
 The Ford Motor Company says, "There will be some tremendous changes in the Ford for 1937, and they represent a basic shift in the Ford division's approach to the car market."
 Generally, new models will be lower and longer because of their reduced weight.
