Is That So?

By EUGENE BURNS
Ranger-Naturalist

It's a strange world. Take fish. The piranha of South America, despite its small size—11 inches at most—has quite likely taken more human lives than any other fish, and that includes the deadly shark. The little piranha's jaw muscles are so strong that it can snap ordinary fishhooks in two and it can sever a finger with grisly ease. A school of these vicious fish has stripped the flesh off a 400-pound hog within ten minutes.

Sharks and their close relatives, the skates, rays and chimeras, are boneless—they have gristle instead of true bone in their skeletons.

The African lungfish has existed in a block of hardened mud for more than four years in a state of suspended animation—and when returned to the water, resumed its unusual life. Normally, it must come to the surface periodically or drown.

The North American paddlefish, except for a part of its tail, has no scales.

Despite their large well-developed gills, tarpon die if denied access to the surface, even though kept in pure, rapidly-flowing sea water. This accounts perhaps for the tarpon's characteristic "rollings"—each time it comes up, it gulps in air which it stores in its air bladder.

Grows by Shrinking

*The celebrated gamey bone-

fish grows by shrinking! Once it reaches about four inches, the fish begins to shrink in size—as much as an inch in four days—to less than one-third of its former size. Meanwhile, its ribbon-like body becomes cylindrical.

Free: By special arrangement with the editors of the Encyclopedia Americana, my panel of judges will award each week to the reader who sends me the best question on nature adventure, the best nature observation, or the best question on nature and wildlife, a complete 30-volume set of this world-famous reference work in a handsome Sealcraft binding. Each week, new submissions will be considered. Sorry, I simply can't answer your many friendly letters. Please address your letter to: Is That So? c/o Medford Mail Tribune, Box 575, Sausalito, Calif.

Snake Steals Cookie

Perth Amboy, N.J. (UPI)—Mrs. James Varga demanded immediate action by municipal authorities to clean out a shed on her property which she said was "alive" with pests. The rats weren't so bad, she conceded. But when a "large and black" snake slithered up to her 5-year-old son and snatched the cookie she was eating, the time had come, Mrs. Varga decided, for action.
