

Ike Told Only Half the Facts, On Peace, Progress, Adlai Says

Washington—(UPI)—Adlai E. Stevenson packed his bags today for another campaign tour, charging President Eisenhower told "only half the facts" about the outlook for peace and progress.

The Democratic presidential nominee, winding up a week of staff planning here, motored to suburban Silver Spring, Md., Thursday night to reply sharply to the President's Wednesday night television talk.

Stevenson accused the President of making "misleading implications" when he talked about "and dismissed curtly" two Stevenson proposals.

One was that the United States explore ways of halting hydrogen bomb tests. The other was that this country consider whether the military draft might be ended.

Clergy Share Viewpoint

Stevenson told a crowd of about 3,800 that when Mr. Eisenhower called the H-bomb proposal a "theatrical national gesture" he "indicted not only me but churchmen, and political leaders the world over... who have made similar proposals."

The Democratic nominee said these leaders included Pope Pius XII, representatives of some Protestant churches, and others.

Aides said Stevenson might devote part of today to screening a few of the films he has made for television use in his campaign. Also on his program were brief appearances late today at two party offices here.

The candidate will leave Saturday on a nine-day plane trip covering almost 7,000 miles. Stevenson was working today on the first speech of that tour to be delivered Saturday at a plowing contest in Newton, Iowa.

Stevenson also said in his speech Thursday night that "if the President intends to foreclose debate on these proposals, I think he does the nation a disservice and I must dissent and persist in my efforts to invite public attention to matters of such grave concern as the hydrogen bomb and national security."

Comments on Speech

Stevenson said "The President gave us a reassuring picture of progress and peace in the world today. I think it is unfortunate that he chose again to state only half the facts."

He said Mr. Eisenhower spoke of rolling back Communism in Viet Nam without mentioning that half of that country had been lost to the Communists.

Kefauver Accuses Brownell of Being 'Evasive and Slick'

Missoula, Mont.—(UPI)—he was finally forced into it, Democratic vice presidential candidate Estes Kefauver accused Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. today of being "evasive and slick" about the Dixon-Yates case.

The No. 2 Democratic candidate fired his latest blast in the Dixon-Yates controversy as he pounded at the public power issue in campaigning through the power conscious Pacific Northwest.

Kefauver said in a statement that Brownell took "liberties with the truth" when he said he took "prompt and vigorous action" in the Dixon-Yates matter.

The Democrats charged there was a conflict of interests in the Dixon-Yates contract, which has since been canceled.

Forced to Move

The contract called for a private utilities combine to build a steam power plant near Memphis, Tenn., to supply electricity to Tennessee Valley Authority.

"The truth is, he took no action on his own initiative," Kefauver said. "The only action Brownell took was first, to help suppress the truth, second, to try to defend the legality of this scandalous deal, and third, when he was finally forced into it, to grudgingly admit the illegality of the very same deal."

In a speech delivered over a telephone circuit to a Democratic rally at Kalspell, Mont., Thursday night, Kefauver attacked President Eisenhower's so-called "partnership" plan for development of rivers.

Weather prevented Kefauver's plane from landing at Kalspell, and he flew instead to Missoula, "Toll Gate" Said Necessary

Kefauver charged that Mr. Eisenhower "will not let the American people have the power developed in their own rivers unless it goes through a private utility toll gate."

The Eisenhower partnership plan, which calls for cooperation of the federal and state governments with private interests, means that taxpayers pay for the dams, Kefauver said.

"But the power company gets the generators and sells the power for its own profit," he said. "This leaves the government with the non-revenue producing features, such as the fish ladders and navigation locks."

He also charged that "not one single kilowatt of electricity has been produced under the Eisenhower partnership policy."

Back Stairs: Rewriting of Speeches

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer

Washington—(UPI)—Back stairs at the White House: Some of the Republicans who work closely with President Eisenhower in the preparation of his speeches have been watching with interest the recent reports from the camp of Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson concerning his speech-writing habits.

Stevenson frequently goes to the last possible minute rewriting his speeches. Mr. Eisenhower at one time had a very strong tendency to rearrange a speech right up to delivery time.

His staff has impressed upon the President, however, the importance, particularly in a campaign year, of getting advance copies of a speech delivered to the press as much ahead of time as possible.

Even though a speech is to be televised nationally, a major political candidate gets far greater circulation for his ideas by early distribution to all news media.

Some of the White House technicians who watched Stevenson on television from Harrisburg, Pa., last week thought there were three basic technical errors in his presentation; His voice at times was too low, the lighting was far from flattering and Stevenson rarely looked straight into the camera.

Mr. Eisenhower, thanks in large part to the experienced advice of Robert Montgomery, tries to look straight at the TV cameras as much as possible. This, say the White House experts, vastly increases the direct speaker-to-viewer element in a major televised address.

At the Republican rally on the Eisenhower farm in Gettysburg last week, Vice President and Mrs. Nixon served as co-hosts with the Eisenhowers in receiving about 600 Republican state leaders.

Before the big tent meeting got under way, however, Mr. Eisenhower discovered that Mrs. Nixon had never been inside the Eisenhower home.

He quickly ordered up his fringed-topped jeep and sent Mrs. Nixon scooting across the pasture for a quick look at the house and a brief visit with the first lady before the two ladies joined the big Republican throng.

Mrs. Nixon, in a dark blue dress and bright green hat, was so reserved and conservative in her deportment that she seemed at times to be apprehensive about appearing before such a crowd. Mrs. Eisenhower, on the other hand, was a gay hostess at a picnic, flitting from group to group in her gay red "Ike" dress which carried pictures of the White House and her husband's former army five stars.

Ask some of the White House staff these days why the President has undertaken certain actions or seen certain groups, and they'll merely top down on the nearest scratch pad in capital letters, "DETIAEY"—which means "Don't forget, this is an election year."

Washington—Adlai E. Stevenson chiding President Eisenhower for "misleading implications" about Stevenson's draft and H-bomb proposals as doing "both of us an injustice": "If the President intends to foreclose debate on these proposals, I think he does the nation a disservice and I must dissent and persist in my efforts to invite public attention to matters of such grave concern as the hydrogen bomb and national security."

London—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles explaining to the Suez conference the need for the proposed canal users association to have its own pilot: "Some of us may not be willing to have pilots from countries not entirely friendly to us and who engage in espionage to pilot their ships through the canal."

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Grace—He freezes up when my parents come.

Arthur—They gave me a very hard time.

Arthur—I cannot understand why it should be so, but it seems that every time my in-laws come to visit us, my wife and I get into a nasty argument. The funny thing is that we never seem to argue except when her parents are visiting. When we are alone, when friends visit or when my parents call, we never seem to run into any difficulty. My wife accuses me of deliberately being unpleasant in order to hurt her parents, but I feel it is the other way around. Ordinarily we are never self-conscious. We say what we please to each other and anything goes. The minute her parents show up, my every word is analyzed and found wanting. If I speak lightly, my wife picks me up for belittling her, and if I weigh my words carefully, she picks me up for being cold or pompous. It is true, of course, that I feel queer when her parents visit, because they gave me a very hard time before our marriage. They were not at all subtle in expressing their disapproval of me. I have swallowed all that, however, and have never said an unkind word to them. I have, in fact, always been attentive to them, have bought my father-in-law gifts and have tried in every way to impress them favorably. But it seems no use trying.

Grace—My parents have misunderstood Arthur, but that is no reason why he should go out of his way to confirm their wrong suspicion.

They always warned me that he would be difficult, inconsiderate and cruel to me. He has been anything but that, except that he freezes up to me the minute they show up. I feel very hurt that they should always leave our house shaking their heads in pity for me when they are so wrong. I want

The Council: This may be a case of making the dog bad by giving him a bad name. It is difficult to subdue the self-consciousness that is forced on a person when he is made the target of sharp accusation.

Grace may be making an error in her approach. She is concerning herself with the lesser of two considerations. She is too eager to justify her marriage to her parents and not sufficiently concerned with her husband's feelings.

She would accomplish much more if, instead of complaining to her husband about his self-conscious behavior in the presence of her parents, she would explain to her parents that Arthur is self-conscious with them because of the strain the created by their unjust criticism of him before marriage.

One appreciative word from her parents—a remark to the effect that they are happy to know that they were wrong about him—would go very far to dispel his self-consciousness and help him to be his usual agreeable self when they call.

If it were Arthur who could not accept the parents, she would have to work on him; but it is the parents who have been unwilling to accept Arthur, and it is certainly time for them to express their acceptance.

Nixon Says GOP To Take Offensive on Farm Prices Debate

En Route With Nixon—(UPI)— Vice-President Richard M. Nixon took his whirlwind campaign tour into the important farming states of the Great Plains today with a determined attack on Democrats critical of President Eisenhower's farm program.

Nixon made it clear on several occasions during the first three days of his exhausting vote-seeking swing that the administration does not intend to retreat from its stand on farm policies.

He said the GOP will take the offensive, not the defensive, on farm prices, even in the politically explosive Midwest, where the Democrats hope to make major gains.

Nixon flew to Rapid City, S.D., from Spokane early today for a brief rest before launching his Midwest campaign attack. His schedule called for speeches to rallies at Rapid City and Fargo, N.D., with a windup at Minneapolis tonight.

Saturday, he appears at Sioux City, Iowa, en route to his first "major" speech Saturday night at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Nixon spent some measure of his time Thursday criticizing Sen. Estes Kefauver, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, for accusing President Eisenhower of working against the "little people" of this country.

"I believe that the great majority of the American people, regardless of party, will resent Kefauver's condescending and contemptuous reference to the so-called 'little people in America,'" Nixon told a Spokane audience.

Nixon said he would be failing in his duty if he kept quiet when Democrats "question his sincerity and his devotion to the interests of the American people."

Prohibition Predicted In Campaign Planks

Atlanta—(UPI)—A temperance leader predicted today that both the Democrats and Republicans soon will adopt "prohibition or total abstinence" campaign platform planks.

Mrs. H. F. Powell, treasurer of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, told the organization's 82nd annual convention that "this political atom bomb" would have a "much-needed" sobering effect on the nation.

While consumers today spend $10,000,000,000 annually for alcoholic beverages, the number of alcoholics in the nation has risen to 4,500,000, Mrs. Powell told an opening convention session.
