The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Man's Long Unfairness To Homeless Children

It is remarkable how many good people have written to scold me for having said that if a woman wants to have a baby by artificial insemination, and her husband agrees, I see no reason why I should say her nay and deny her the right to reach out for happiness. It is none of my business. My correspondents called artificial insemination adultery, but the dictionary defines that as "voluntary sexual intercourse between a married woman and any other than the lawful spouse." Obviously, when a physician, using a long syringe, injects a few drops of semen into a woman's vagina there is no sexual act.

Dr. Alvarez

Strangely, when, a hundred years ago, the world's first great woman's surgeon — J. Marion Sims—started trying to find ways of curing sterility in married couples, the wrath that descended upon him was devastating. Even physicians attacked him and accused him of desecrating the marriage bed. He was so hurt that he largely quit this work, and nothing more was done about it until recent years. Now the attacks are on again. It is curious that people have always been hostile to anyone who would try to place in a loving woman's arms the baby whom she so longs for.

Even adoption has long been frowned upon by legal profession and others, and the illegitimate child has always been looked on as a sort of disreputable person who should never have gotten mixed up in an unsavory mess!

Child Could Lose Out

I was surprised to read the other day in the book by Mr. and Mrs. Brooks—"Adventuring in Adoption"—that in England adoption was not legalized until 1926. And this did not mean that the adopted child could inherit the property of his foster-parents. Even when they willed it to him, he could easily lose out in the courts because the laws on the subject are anything but clear.

The Brooks' say that in this country the laws on adoption are so mixed-up in the several states that when a will contest comes before a judge the poor man has "to flounder in an almost uncharted sea."

Adoption of children into homes, instead of incarceration in drab, often cruelly run orphan asylums, became fairly common some 60 years ago when I was a boy. I remember then reading of a wealthy man in England who placed hundreds of orphans in homes of good people in South Africa and elsewhere.

In America great credit must go to Theodore Roosevelt who, in 1909, called the first White House Conference on homeless children, out of which came the "Children's Bureau." This was the first public agency in the world to look after the welfare of homeless children. Since our courts have been so very slow to safeguard the rights of orphaned and adopted children, I suppose it will be 100 years now before the law will grant any rights to the child conceived after some artificial form of insemination. Why should we always be so heartless and so cruel to the child who, through no fault of his own, comes into the world in some way not hallowed by tradition.

Bell's Palsy

Many persons ask what to do for a Bell's Palsy of half of the face. They might consult a neurologist, but I doubt if the neurologist could do much for them that their family doctor at home could not do, which is usually nothing. In most cases one waits until the nerve recovers its strength or grows out again. There is no medicine that I know of that can be taken by mouth to hurry the process. I imagine it would help if a physiotherapist would massage the muscles of the face, or stimulate them electrically. Fortunately, in all but a few cases, after some months the power of the muscles comes back. I do not know what the cause is—I imagine it usually is a virus that causes inflammational in the facial nerve.

Popping in the Ears

Many ask what is wrong when the ears pop. Sometimes it happens when a person is on a train which is rapidly going down a mountain-side. Then it is due to increasing pressure of the air on the eardrums. In order to equalize the pressure on the two sides of the drum, all a person has to do is to swallow several times; then air goes up through the so-called eustachian tube from the throat into the middle ear.

Sometimes when a person has a cold and the mouths of the eustachian tubes in the throat are somewhat swollen, there may be difficulty in the passing of air up into the middle ears, and then there may be some popping of the ears. There is no need for worrying about the condition because it is usually transient. It is not indicative of any serious disease of the ear.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

Release by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1956)

Buffalo, N.Y.—(U.P.)—The Buffalo Courier-Express said Wednesday the Bell Aircraft Corp. X2 rocket plane had reached a record altitude of 23.86 miles.
