

McKay Points To Money Record; Morse Sees Foe as 'Rubber Stamp'

By UNITED PRESS
The Morse-McKay battle for the U. S. Senate continued to draw most of the verbal fireworks in Oregon politics today but other candidates were getting in their say with the Nov. 6 election slightly less than a month away.

Douglas McKay, speaking at Beaverton, centered his remarks on the records of the two parties in national spending.

People "who have seen the annual federal tax bill go up from three billion to 65 billion dollars under the Democrat administration, should recognize the need for a senator who will support Eisenhower," McKay said.

Morse turned his full salvo on McKay in his speech at The Dalles last night.

Would Be Rubber Stamp
"By attacking the independence of judgment I have shown in the senate, McKay lets it be known what type of representation he would give in the Senate — he would be a rubber stamp for pressure groups,"

Morse asserted.
Republican National Committeeman Bob Mautz, in an address last night, blasted Democratic charges that McKay has a huge "slush fund" behind him in his race for the senate.

"When a political candidate has the financial resources for an expensive, all-out campaign, don't be hoodwinked by his screams that his opponent has a huge slush fund and unlimited financial backing," Mautz said.

He termed reports that Morse had no funds and McKay unlimited resources as "sheer bunk and falsehood."

To Head Conservationists
Lyle F. Watts, a former Chief Forester of the United States, yesterday was named as a vice-chairman of the Oregon volunteers for Stevenson-Kefauver. Watts will head a special committee of conservationists in Oregon.

Gov. Elmo Smith carried his campaign to La Grande last night and was joined there by Rep. Sam Coon.

Earlier in the day at Pendleton, Smith had defended his record in the state Senate, which has been under attack by his Democratic opponent, Robert D. Holmes.

"Keep in mind my opponent is extremely left wing Democrat and I am a middle of the road Republican," the governor said.

Smith defended his vote against the United Nations resolution in the state Senate and said what hasn't been mentioned by his opponent was the fact the state Legislature repealed the resolution in the next session.

Coon told his audience "this country will enjoy continued prosperity only as long as free enterprise is preserved and encouraged."
Asks Election of Lee
Sen. Richard L. Neuberger spoke in Woodburn last night, calling for the election of Jason Lee, Democrat, in the first district.

Neuberger criticized the record of Rep. Walter Norblad on agriculture, timber products and harbor development and said the Republicans have dominated the district for too long.

Holmes carried his campaign to Portland last night where he spoke at the weekly meeting of the Portland Central Labor council. The Democratic nominee reiterated his challenge to Gov. Smith to campaign on his record.

Rep. Harris Ellsworth, Republican, carried his campaign to Jackson county yesterday. He is scheduled to deliver a major address in Ashland Wednesday.

Al Ullman, seeking to unseat Coon in the second district, spoke in The Dalles last night. He called for immediate construction of the John Day dam as a federal project.

Alibi Witnesses Due in Brink's Case

Boston—(U.P.)—More alibi witnesses appear today in the trial of eight men accused of the million dollar robbery at Brink's Inc., six years ago.

Timothy Nyhan, an employee of defendant Joseph McGinnis, testified Monday he saw his boss talking with a police lieutenant on Jan. 17, 1950, the day masked bandits crashed the money vaults.

McGinnis, who the state contends engineered the holdup, never has been placed at the robbery scene. According to bandit informer Joseph (Specs) O'Keefe, McGinnis remained in his cafe to establish an alibi while other members of the gang made the assault on Brink's Inc.

Choice of William Brennan Jr. To Supreme Court Gets Applause

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Correspondent
Washington—(U.P.)—Not the least of the general applause which continues to greet President Eisenhower's latest Supreme Court choice comes from Republican political strategists.

Mr. Eisenhower long since ceased to be a political amateur.

He got his master's ticket some time ago. If he hadn't got it already, surely it would issue with the selection of William Joseph Brennan Jr., to succeed associate Justice Sherman Minton, resigned.

William Joseph Brennan Jr., is precisely the man for whom Mr. Eisenhower was looking— young, good lawyer with both trial and bench experience with an outstanding record as a judge. Justice Brennan, however, has other qualifications which are peculiarly important this year. He's a New Jersey Democrat of Irish blood and a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Eisenhower is right now engaged in urging Democrats who voted for him in 1952 to repeat this year. If they fail to do so in sufficient numbers, Mr. Eisenhower almost surely will be defeated in his reelection bid. Mr. Eisenhower bears down hard on the idea that he is less partisan than some and, especially, that he is the president of all the people, not just a party president.

A Significant Selection
The choice of Brennan, in view of the foregoing, could be the most significant political selection for high office that Mr. Eisenhower has made or ever will. It is likely to win or hold some Democratic and Catholic votes for Mr. Eisenhower and, in a very close election, a few votes here or there make the difference between victory and defeat.

The President has been considerably mauled by the opposition on charges of loading his cabinet with and for big business. But in many other appointive areas, Mr. Eisenhower has made political medicine for himself and the Republican party with his picks.

He drafted the Senate dean, Walter F. George of Georgia, as his personal representative to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The draft came at a time when Congressional Democrats were beginning to object to United States subsidy of foreign armaments.

Mr. Eisenhower chose Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.) to be among the U.S. representatives to the United Nations Assembly. They have been active critics of administration foreign policy. All such are right out of FDR's manual of political performance.

Variety in Sports
So are the President's easy news conference manners and his awareness that to love golf is okay, but a President is supposed to go to the ball game occasionally, too. It is not enough merely to love the voters. A good politician also loves the voters' sports if he can make himself do it.

Eisenhower does all of these things. It cannot be said that he excels in the sense of topping FDR. Who but the late Mr. Roosevelt would have thought in a campaign year of suddenly stuffing a couple of top drawer Republicans into his cabinet. That was 1940, and they were the late Henry L. Stimson and the late Frank Knox. Who but FDR would have thought of kidnapping the Republican presidential nominee after defeating him? That was in 1940, also, and the man was Wendell L. Willkie, who became Mr. Roosevelt's roving world ambassador.

Harry S. Truman was no slouch. Mr. Truman had a Supreme Court vacancy to fill in 1945 and found best fitted for it a former Senate colleague, Associate Justice Harold Hitz Burton of Ohio, a Republican. The governor of Ohio was a Democrat who promptly put a Democrat in Republican Burton's Senate seat. It was a great deal for everyone except the Republican party.

Nematode Infestation Discovered in Oregon

Corvallis—(U.P.)—An infestation of nematode, a worm which damages sugar beets, has been discovered in a 15-acre field between Nyssa and Ontario in eastern Oregon.

The Ontario-Nyssa area grows a large amount of sugar beets and the Amalgamated Sugar company contracts for some 45,000 acres of beets annually in the Oregon-Idaho area near Ontario.

This is the first time that an infestation of nematode has been reported from the area. The worm thrives on roots and the beet itself.

Oregon State college and State Department of Agriculture officials said that if the worm gets started production per acre seldom would exceed 15 tons. Normal yield is 25 to 30 tons per acre in the Ontario area.

How widespread the nematode is hasn't been determined.

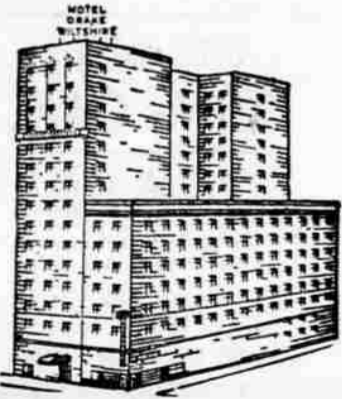

NEW PENS
New ball point pens, replacing the old-style pen point and holders, were put in use at the Medford post office Monday. The pens are chained to the desks, in the lobby, each desk having two pens.
