

Adlai Accepts Issue as Defined By Ike; Seeks Keystone Votes

En Route With Stevenson—Adlai E. Stevenson campaigned by train and motorcade through Pennsylvania today trying to nail down the Keystone state's 32 electoral votes.

The Democratic presidential nominee will go to Pittsburgh tonight when he will deliver his "answer" to President Eisenhower's attack on the Democrats two days ago.

Stevenson boarded the campaign train at Hoboken, N. J., Tuesday night after disclosing his plans for tonight's speech.

He said that in speeches at Cleveland and Lexington, Ky., Mr. Eisenhower said the election would turn on which party "has done more to help all citizens meet the problems of their daily lives."

Accepts the Issue

"President Eisenhower has defined the issue," Stevenson said, "and I speak for every Democrat in the country when I say that we accept the issue as he defines it."

Run down the list of all the measures which have established the framework of economic security and social welfare within which our competitive system now functions with such success—and ask yourself which one originated with the Republicans," he said.

"The answer is none."

Today's train trip through Pennsylvania gave Stevenson his first taste of whistle-stopping. Previously he has conducted all his campaigning by plane and auto. His first scheduled stop was a Scranton, Pa., for a speech at the courthouse before driving to Wilkes-Barre and Kingston, Pa., where he will resume his train trip.

Other towns on his trip included Berwick, Bloomsburg, Northumberland, Sunbury, Lewisburg, Huntingdon, Tyrone, Altoona and Johnstown.

To Give Major Speech

After a rally at Johnstown tonight, Stevenson will entrain for Pittsburgh to deliver a television speech at 11 p.m. (EDT). Pennsylvania went Republican four years ago, but it is one of the populous northern states the Democrats are most confident of carrying in this year's election.

Today's visit was the second by Stevenson to this state within a month.

His trip today was to take him 715 miles and wind up at Elkins, W. Va., after the Pittsburgh speech.

He will spend the night on the train and campaign in the Elkins area Thursday, leaving by plane in mid-afternoon for New York City.

Stevenson had one of the most hectic days of his campaign Tuesday, touring northern New Jersey by automobile.

"I feel as though I were trying to use up a whole month's commutation ticket before sundown," the weary candidate remarked to one crowd as his long day neared an end.

Ellsworth Discusses World Affairs During SOC Assembly Today

Ashland—Harris Ellsworth, Republican candidate seeking reelection as congressman from the fourth district, told an assembly at Southern Oregon college this morning that "the Golden Rule of life is the one common denominator of humanity that could guide governments and men in their charting of world affairs."

The congressman said that the Soviet's drive for world domination and complete world control is unlike all other conflicts between countries, races, or governments in that the Communist ambition is total. He explained it as a triangle of economic materialism and political power held together by a creed of force—the fanaticism of Communism.

Ellsworth pointed out that "while we strengthen our defenses we must point out to all the peoples of the world that individual freedom, such as we enjoy, is combination of economic freedom, intellectual free-

Search Pressed For Downed Fliers

Birmingham, Ala.—UPI—Pilots and ground parties today searched for two downed airmen, believed either lost or immobilized with injuries in a rain-soaked and rugged forest.

The men, both colonels, were believed to have bailed out of their T33 jet trainer Monday night before it crashed and burned 23 miles south of here.

Rescue leaders said they had "good reason" to believe the men were alive, and perhaps lost or injured and unable to reach help.

An air search was hampered Tuesday by foggy weather. Ground searchers found it slow going in the wet, thick undergrowth.

The men were identified by Maxwell Air Force base at Montgomery, Ala., as Marine Col. Jens C. Aggerbeck Jr., 43, of Los Angeles, a student at the Air War college, and Air Force Col. Philip P. Hawes, 43, a college faculty member and pilot instructor.
