ENLARGED LYMPH NODES IN THE NECK
Any person whose lymph nodes in the neck enlarge greatly should know enough to go quickly to a physician to see what is wrong. Oftentimes when the glands enlarge a little bit, perhaps with an attack of what looks like a siege of influenza, it doesn't mean much. There are many persons whose lymph nodes tend to enlarge whenever they run a fever.

Some young people get glandular fever or infectious mononucleosis. This is an influenza-like disease which can make the person uncomfortable for six months or more. The disease can be identified by laboratory tests. In the old days, many young people in tuberculous families got enlarged lymph nodes in the neck, and later these broke down and discharged for years. Today, we seldom see this. Nobody but an old physician knows what a wonderful boon to children certified and pasteurized milks have been. In the old days, when children drank raw milk, they took in large numbers of tubercle bacilli from the often infected cows. As a result, hundreds of thousands got tuberculosis of lymph nodes, joints, bones, bowels and the meninges (coverings of the brain) or the kidneys.

In middle-aged persons great enlargement of the lymph nodes can be due to Hodgkin's disease, which is a cancer-like disease due apparently to a virus. It can be cleared up often with x-ray. I have seen cases in which it disappeared for seven or eight years. In older persons the physician has to think of cancer which has spread down from the region of the mouth or up from the lungs or the stomach. Often the best thing the physician can do is to remove a gland and examine it under the microscope to see what it is.

Persons Tired All The Time
Mrs. Lucile Felin, of Antioch, Calif., writes that nearly 60 years ago her little sister, aged 5, spoke a piece at a church social. This is what she said: "There was an old woman who always was tired. She lived in a house where help was not hired. Her last words on earth were, 'Dear Friends, I am going. Where washing ain't done or cooking or sewing. And everything there will be exact to my wishes. For where they don't eat, there's no washing of dishes. Don't cry for me now, don't cry for me ever. I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever!'"

Campus Barbers Return To 5-Day Week After War
Corvallis — (U.P.) — Corvallis barbers have ended their price war that was being waged on the issue of a six-day vs. a five-day work week. Barbers in the vicinity of the Oregon State College campus had gone on a six-day week, the school went on a six-day week. The resulting battle with downtown barbers resulted in $1 haircuts for a time. Campus barbers returned to a five-day week.

Hollywood—Attorney Saul Ross on Nora Eddington Haymes' claim that former husband singer Dick Haymes was in arrears on alimony payments: "Haymes says it cost him $100,000 to marry Rita Hayworth. We want to get to him before it costs any more."

Brooklyn—President Eisenhower, congratulating Dodge President Walter O'Malley on Brooklyn's World Series victory: "I wish you would tell Sal Maglie that I thought he pitched one hell of a ball game."

Washington—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, scolding the Communists' denial of God and their preaching of class hatred: "... We can be confident that in the long run those materialistic godless concepts will not prevail."

Washington—Emil Jonsson, acting foreign minister of Iceland, on the problem posed by the presence of American troops in his country: "Let us make clear the difference between being anti-military, or perhaps rather non-military minded, and our having animosity toward any nation. The Icelanders have no such feeling."

Brooklyn Dodger pitcher Don Newcombe complaining the extra day's rest caused by the World Series postponement may hamper his style: "I like to stay in a steady pitching routine and with an extra day's rest I might lose that pinpoint control."

Chicago—Mrs. Lois Bucher reporting a woman she had befriended had kidnapped her month-old son: "I felt sorry for her, so I told her I'd take her home with me and give her something to eat."

Is That So?

One of the most appalling wastes in the woods is that of deerskins. Experts tell me that more than 75 per cent of all deerskins either spoil or are thrown away by the hunter. And of the 25 percent which reach the tannery, fully 15 per cent have been pretty well ruined by the hunter.

More's the pity. A deer's hide is one of the most beautiful in the world—some say, it is the most beautiful. And I'm among 'em. The better-soft skin is said to be the nearest approach any skin makes to pliable cloth.

Tucker said major factors in the good crop include use of commercial fertilizer and planting of improved hybrid varieties. Proper spacing of rows in planting corn and use of spray to control weeds; were also contributing factors.

He said the Southern Oregon Experiment station has developed three types of hybrid corn that are particularly adaptable for this area. They include Illinois Hybrid 200, Illinois Hybrid 1570 and Oregon Hybrid 150.

They are still working on the project, and have set a goal of 28,000 stalks per acre for Jackson county. During the past five years the station has been collecting data on yields for use in the experiment.

IVAN TO COACH HAWKS

St. Catharines, Ont. — (U.P.) — General Manager Tommy Ivan will double as coach of the Chicago Black Hawks for the 1956-1957 National Hockey league season. Ivan named himself to succeed 64-year-old Dick Irvin, who resigned from the post last Saturday because of pressure and ill health. Ivan said he will coach the club until he can find a suitable replacement.

Ousted Inmate Slays Owner of Rest Home

Los Angeles — (U.P.) — A former rest home patient lured the proprietress outside and then hacked her to death with a sickle Thursday because she forced him to leave the home, police reported.

Mrs. Mary Morris, 55, died of slashes on the face, neck, arms and abdomen as an ambulance crew administered first aid. Gabriel Di Bella, 50, who was a patient at the home in the Highland Park District until a few weeks ago, was arrested on suspicion of murder.

Police said Di Bella, a cripple, summoned Mrs. Morris outside by pressing a signal buzzer from a nearby cottage. As the woman hurried along a path Di Bella jumped from behind a bush and attacked her with the sickle. Her screams awoke the 105 patients of the home and police were called.

Di Bella, who was found hiding in the bushes, told police he was "mad at her because she made me leave the home."
