Local Members To Attend Academy Open House Sunday

Fourteen members of the local Seventh-day Adventist churches plan to attend the reception for Governor Elmo Smith and the formal public open house of the Seventh-day Adventist Milo academy Sunday, Oct. 7.

The new school, located 17 miles east of Canyonville, through not completely finished, was opened to students last year. Some 225 students are enrolled this year. When complete the school will have a capacity of 300 students.

The event Sunday will signal the completion of the two 150 capacity dormitories for boys and girls, the kitchen-dining room, the gymnasium, power plant, vocational training building, and a model farm with the latest modern dairy equipment.

The 447 acre Lazy Bar 8 ranch was purchased in 1952 from G. Corwin. Since then the Oregon Seventh-day Adventist have given the funds to provide the new school. Some $1,000,000 have already been put into the project by Adventists without government or state aid. The Milo academy is one of three boarding and day schools on the high school level operated by the church in Oregon. Governor Smith will address
