The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

A Brain Clock

According to that genius—that expert on electrical calculating machines — Norbert Wiener, these machines can give us many hints as to how our brain work, and the researches of brain physiologists will often give ideas as to how an electrical calculator could be designed. Because of this fact, Professor Wiener and several professors of brain physiology keep in constant touch with each other.

Dr. Alvarez

Now, Professor Wiener writes that he and his colleagues have identified a sort of clock that keeps the brain ticking away normally. This ticking, of course, is not loud enough to be heard by the person's ears—it can be detected only with that extremely sensitive recorder of minute electric currents, the electroencephalograph. Dr. Wiener says it is conceivable that some mental disorders are due to this "clock's" running irregularly or too fast or too slow, hence research workers must now study this mechanism in the brains of thousands of normal and mentally disturbed persons.

Day after day now I will keep welcoming in this column these new scientific researches which are taking the place of the old pseudo-scientific mumbo-jumbo of some psychoanalysts.

Drug to Discourage Drinkers

A drug—trichlorethylene—has been found that can discourage men from drinking. If a person who has taken a dose of the drug drinks even two beers his face will get so red that he will be uncomfortable. This phenomenon was discovered accidentally by some workers in a factory where they inhaled a lot of trichlorethylene—a commercial solvent.

Male Rats Like Mothers

Now that phychiatrists are breaking away from the sterile routine of spinning Freudian theories about the behavior of the brain, some are going into the laboratory to learn what happens to an animal when a certain part of its brain is stimulated or injured or destroyed. I was just reading that Dr. Alan E. Fisher, of the Universtiy of Wisconsin, has found that if he injected a fraction of a droplet of female hormone into a certain spot in the brain of a male rat, the animal would start showing strong maternal tendencies. It would build a nest and then, after borrowing some baby rats, it would groom them carefully as a mother rate would.

This type of experiment shows that peculiar behavior in man sometimes be due not to cussedness, or an Oedipus complex or infantile sexual injury but to the action of the secretion of some gland on the brain.

Salem Would Like To Keep UAL, Have Feeder

Salem—(U.P.) — Salem would like to keep United Air Lines but would also like the service of an additional feeder line, city and Chamber of Commerce officials decided yesterday.

Both Southwest and West Coast Airlines are seeking Civil Aeronautics Board approval for feeder service to Salem to supplement United service, but United contends it will be forced to move out of the city if a feeder line is installed.

Bavaria Claims World Beer Drinking Record

Munich, Germany—(U.P.)—The state of Bavaria today claimed the beer-drinking record of the world.

The Breweries association said for the year ending Sept. 30 an average of 31½ gallons of beer was drunk for each man, woman and child in the state, more than twice the figure for the rest of Germany. Latest figures available here showed that in the U. S., Wisconsin is runnerup, with 26 gallons per head.
