Shut them in. With their triumphs and their glories. And the rest. Love is best! What is the earth. With all its art, verse, music worth. Compared with love found, gained and kept? —ROBERT BROWNING

What color is your automobile? Did your wife decide on the color? If she didn't you must have her well trained. You are one in a thousand among husbands. Anyway, research indicates dull-colored cars are involved in the most collisions. Especially green cars. Those in the least number of such accidents are red cars. With yellow and white cars next in order named.

Please Note
Was nice and cool for the football opener in the New York area this season. It is not always thus. I once played in a late September football game in Hoboken, N.J., against Stevens Institute. The temperature was 83 in the shade. I played the entire game. I lost 14 pounds. Yes, sir. That's right, 14 pounds in one afternoon. I wasn't overweight either. Weighed 190 at start of game.

Asking
Queries from clients. Q. Is it true that London policemen do not carry pistols or any type of guns? A. That's right. Members of the metropolitan police force of London are not armed. Q. Can a bachelor adopt a child in this country? A. Yes, sir. However, it is a very difficult procedure and is seldom done. Incidentally, Pierre-Louis Guerin, the Paris showman who is a bachelor, has six adopted children. The youngsters live with him on his magnificent estate at Chantilly. Q. In what opera was Caruso appearing in San Francisco at the time of the great earthquake and fire in that city? A. Carmen.

Len (July 24-Aug. 23) females have a very strong belief in the equality of men and women. When a Leo woman wants a career, and she usually does, her husband should not interfere. Not that it would do him any good but would make things very unpleasant. The Leo girls are brilliant, clever, witty and sweetly but effectively dynamic. They are excellent home managers if they have all the house-keeping gadgets on the market plus a maid and a cook. They are excellent mothers. They will stand for no interference as to the manner in which a child should be reared. Especially not by mothers-in-law. Leo women, when aroused, throw things at their mothers-in-law. Or so say the stargazers.

Nixon, Kefauver Agree on Necessity To Preserve Israel

Washington — (U.P.) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Sen. Estes Kefauver agreed Sunday that preserving the state of Israel is in the best interests of the United States.

But the two vice presidential candidates, in speeches to the 59th annual Zionist convention, differed as to whether the Eisenhower administration is doing enough to help establish peace in the Middle East.

Nixon said that President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles have worked ceaselessly to promote peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors. This, he said, will continue to be one of the administration's "top objectives."

He said the administration recognizes that "preservation of the independence of Israel is in the best interests" of the United States and "of world peace itself."

He said that making the Middle East crisis a political issue "will serve neither the interests of Israel or the United States."

Kefauver, who spoke at a different time but from the same platform as Nixon, attacked administration Middle East policies and Mr. Eisenhower personally.

He said "pious platitudes from no matter how high a source will never bring about the kind of peace for which the whole world yearns."

He also charged that Dulles helped bring on Egypt's seizure of the Suez canal by offering to build the Aswan dam and then backing down later on the offer. He said this was a "high price to pay for the privilege of watching Mr. Dulles show off like the handsome young man on the flying trapeze."

Eugene Gasoline Price Cut in War

Eugene — (U.P.) — Several Eugene service station operators have cut pump prices as much as three cents per gallon in the past week to meet competition as a price war among dealers flared.

Prices a week ago quoted regular at 32.9 cents per gallon and premium at 36.9 cents per gallon. Poster prices at major outlets dropped to 28.9 cents for regular and 32.9 cents for premium.

One dealer posted a large sign at his station proclaiming "Regular 20.9 gallon, taxes extra."

Is That So?

Want to be a master woodsman? Then gather round—you've got to learn to cook that indigestible, bean-hole beans. It's as basic as bread and butter. Besides, it's a perfect outdoor dish, and can be prepared so far in advance that it can save the evening for a weary, rain-soaked pilgrim coming in from a day's hunting or fishing. And there should be leftovers for days to come.

For turning them out, you'll need a tin or aluminum camp kettle with a cover that fits down snug on the outside. The last is essential.

Soak the beans overnight. Or, to shorten the process, parboil 'em. To further the process, add a teaspoon of baking soda to break down their resistance. Then parboil. Pour off this water and add boiling water to cover the beans to a quarter of an inch. Sprinkle in some salt—not much. Add brown sugar (why carry white sugar into the woods at all, it isn't nearly as tasty) about a cupful to every two quarts of beans and water. If you have lemons, de-seed and add the squeezings of two. Cover the beans with cross-strips or slabs of dried salt pork.

Think that does it? Far from it. Anyone with the name of camp cook could have done as much; what comes now calls for the master's intuition, based upon experience.

I trust you have a bull cook, perhaps you know him by the title of assistant. See that he has prepared a pit, at least two feet deep, and a blazing fire atop it. A sandy lake beach or river bar of course is by far the best—easiest to dig, cleanest, and safest regarding fire hazard. He should have piled on all the wood he could find—hardwood preferably. The big blaze will not only heat the pit but also the soil around it. And leave you a good bed of coals.

Nestle Kettle Into Coals
Now, shovel out half the coals and nestle your bean kettle prayerfully and tenderly into the remaining coals. Heap up the sides of your kettle with coals, and, if you have enough, over the top. Then pile on the hottest sand or earth until you have a mound.

This done, go off blissfully on your day's fishing, or hunting—carrying a light snack of dried prunes and chocolate in the bandana tied to your hip or tucked down inside the back of your shirt.

Figure on getting back within six hours—or whatever time your intuition calls for; and here is where tenderfoots are separated from old campaigners—know how long to wait. If too long, the kettle may be filled with shriveled inedible beans; if not cooked long enough, the beans will be only partly done—but they can be salvaged by finishing the job in a frying pan.

To help your intuition along, know this: dry sand requires the shortest time; loam the longest. Wet sand, in between. But the only way to learn that I know of, is to try, and try again. But it's worth a failure or two in learning. Then, mastered, you're in the Ph.D. of C.C. (Doctor of Philosophy in Camp Cooking.)

Done right, the beans will be rich brown, each retaining its shape but yet soft and tender, with the pork cooked and its fat sinking to cover all the beans. And because they were cooked in a bean-hole, nothing of the flavor escapes as it does in oven or frying pan.

Warming Up Improves
Don't worry ever about having too many. Each time they are warmed up in a frying pan, they improve. For the first meal, I'd suggest add nothing; take 'em straight to get the real unadulterated taste of beans; next meal or three removed, for variety, add browned onions and season with soy sauce and catsup or Worcestershire sauce alone. I'll guarantee that will take care of all the leftover—before you turn your hand to a potful of hobo stew which we'll consider at another time when you're through drooping.
