The Medical Roundup

Hepatitis

Dozens of people want to know what to do for hepatitis. Usually, by the time they know they have it, the inflammation is over with and all that is left is some scarring of the liver.

Hepatitis is a common disease of soldiers during the war. It was due to either one of two viruses. The one of ordinary epidemic jaundice generally produces a mild form of the disease which does not need any treatment, and is not followed by serious results. In some cases the other virus produces severe damage to the liver, and then the end-result may be what is called cirrhosis or hardening or fibrosis of the liver.

Since the last World War, the medical literature has been full of articles on hepatitis and I have read dozens of them. The impression I get is that there is no good drug treatment for the disease, and no special diet worth trying. Some time ago Army physicians who had treated hundreds of these cases wrote that the best diet was a good full generous one, such as will maintain the soldier's nutrition at a high level.

If I had a severe form of hepatitis about all I would know to do would be to pray that I would be left enough good liver

$200,000 Spent on 'Contributions,' Hodge Testifies

Chicago—(U.P.)—Deposed state auditor Orville Hodge testified Tuesday he spent $200,000 on "political contributions."

Hodge, now serving a prison term for his $1,300,000 raid on the state treasury, testified before the Senate Banking committee.

He said his contributions to the Republican campaign in Illinois in 1952 came from his own funds.

Committee chairman Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) expressed doubt.

Hodge said he spent $1,500,000 on the 1952 primary and $50,000 on the election.

Earlier, Hodge said he could not recall what he did with $85,000 handed him in a lump sum by a bank teller during his looting of state funds.

Fulbright promptly accused Hodge of lying.

At one point, the former playboy politician who lived in the lap of luxury said he is worried now about how his wife will be able to make ends meet.

Hodge, who began testifying at the opening session of the hearing Monday, was excused today after Fulbright rebuked him severely for evading questions.

MOO-O-O'S AND MUSINGS

There was a time when King Arthur got mad at organized baseball and wouldn't let any of the round table boys play.

Obviously, the sign outside the stadium said, "Game called because of reign."

tissue so that I could live on in comfort for the rest of my days. Early Amputees

Women who have a child born without an arm or leg ask me what chance a second child of theirs would run of getting a similar amputation. My impression is that another child would run no danger because there would be little chance of the umbilical cord's getting wrapped around the arm or leg. I doubt very much if the condition would be hereditary.
