The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Walter R.—I can't stand my wife's family.
Janet R.—I could never give up my family.

Walter R.—When I married my wife ten years ago, I thought I married just one woman. Instead I find I am married to her widowed mother, two brothers and two sisters. I never liked her family. Now I find that I have to spend a good part of every week end with them.

When I come home at night, my wife is continually talking to one of them on the telephone and another one is hanging around the house.

She spends more time shopping for her sisters than for our own children. Only one of the sisters is married, and she and the others require all kinds of advice. The brothers seem to have lots of time on their hands and like nothing better than to "kill an evening" at our home. I won't make any bones about the fact that I just can't stand those people and I've come to the point where I feel my wife must choose between them and me.

Janet R.—My husband hated family from the start. I had forebodings about this and should not have married him. Although I still feel I love him. Nevertheless, I find it very hateful to have him picking on my family all the time.

Some of the things he says are exaggerations and some are even fabrications. I have even talked to my relatives and I know they are on their good behavior when he is around. He overlooks completely the fact that they run errands for me and help me in many ways.
I cannot give up my family. My father died when I was quite young, and I have always felt a lot of responsibility for my mother, my kid sisters and brothers. They still need my help and I wish there were some way to persuade my husband to understand.

The Council: Walter certainly seems to have a legitimate beef, but he confuses the issue and alienates his wife by insisting on his dislike of her family. Whether he loves or hates Janet's family is not important. He has no right to expect her to dislike them or to cut all her ties with them.

But Walter has a right to expect his wife to be more devoted to him and their children than she is to her mother, sisters and brothers.
Janet resents Walter's resentment of her family. She feels he is making the unfair demand that she drop them entirely. This seems like a threat to all the relationships that are so important to her. She reacts by giving her family more time than she might otherwise.

Janet's devotion is understandable in view of the fact that she is the oldest, but she is obviously far exceeding the bounds of normal love for them. This is apparently an adult family with no special problems. She insists upon making them more dependent on her than they need be. She does them a great deal of harm by this—besides the harm she does her own husband and children.

Walter has the right to expect his wife's attention and companionship in the evening. He has a right to expect to spend some week ends with just his wife and children. If Walter got these things, he would dislike his wife's family much less. He would find that they share some of the qualities that he likes in his wife.

Janet must learn that her real family consists of Walter and her children. They need her most. Her mother, brothers and sisters will be much better off without her "help."

Medford Residents Appreciate New Pens

Medford residents must really appreciate the eight ball point pens recently installed in the post office to replace the old "stick type" pens.

Several other post offices in the state have reported thefts of the new pens and officials have threatened to bring back the old ones unless the thefts stopped.

Post Master Moore Hamilton said this morning, "I'm happy to report nothing like that has happened in Medford. We have a higher-type citizenry that doesn't stoop to stealing post office pens."

Phillip Parrish Dies in Portland

Portland—(UP)—Phillip H. Parrish, who directed the editorial page of the Oregonian for 18 years before his retirement last January, died here yesterday at the age of 60.

Parrish had been active in the newspaper field nearly all of his adult life. He had served in various positions with the Oregonian before becoming editor of the newspaper's editorial page. Prior to his duties with the Oregonian, Parrish worked for the Journal in Portland as a reporter from 1919 to 1927. He served as editor of the Oregon State college alumni publication for a year after leaving the Journal and then joined the staff of the Oregonian.

Prior to serving in the Army during World War I, he worked on the Morning Olympian at Olympia, Wash., and the Bellingham, Wash., Herald.

Parrish was born in Constantine, Mich., Sept. 5, 1896 and spent most of his younger life in Nebraska.

His book, "Historic Oregon," published in 1937, is the official textbook in public schools of the state where Oregon history courses are taught.

He is survived by his widow, Margaret, a daughter, Mrs. John H. Davidson and three grandchildren.

Stocks Extend Gains

New York—(UP)—Stocks extended last week's gains until late in the day when profit-taking reduced prices from their best levels.

Trading increased sharply over Friday but still was small compared to what Wall Street expects of the market.

Many individual issues registered wide gains because of which demand and supply is limited and only a small amount of either brings wide swings.

SHARE BECAUSE WE DO CARE!

When we share our plenty with the needy overseas, we show that we care for them and we keep their faith in life alive. To aid them, appeals are being made this fall for funds to finance free distribution to them of U. S. surplus foods, for rehabilitation and reconstruction programs, and for ten million pounds of clothing vitally needed as winter nears. YOU can share with the needy personally through YOUR religious faith's Thanksgiving appeals for overseas aid.

In Protestant Churches, give to the SHARE-OUR-SURPLUS APPEAL.

In Catholic Churches, give to THE BISHOPS' THANKSGIVING CLOTHING COLLECTION.

In Synagogues, give to the UNITED JEWISH APPEAL SPECIAL SURVIVAL FUND.

GIVE THANKS BY GIVING THIS THANKSGIVING—GIVE THROUGH YOUR FAITH
