Religious Sect Halts Vote Registration

Wausau, Wis.—(U.P.)—A block has been thrown in the path of Wausau's drive to score 100 per cent voting registration by a group of Jehovah's Witnesses and some immigrant husbands who refuse to allow their wives to register.

The drive had reached past the 95 per cent mark Wednesday night, with seven days to go, when it was stymied by the religous sect and the immigrants.

A group of about 80 Jehovah's Witnesses, who are eligible to vote, said they would not register because "Jesus was neutral in politics and so are we."

Elmer Klaprat, chairman of the registration campaign, said the immigrant husbands are registered voters themselves, but simply won't permit their wives to register.

Klaprat quoted one of the immigrants as saying: "Women had no vote in the old country and will have none here."

Wausau is competing with two other equal size Midwest cities in the drive—Highland Park, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa. Highland Park ended its registration campaign with a 99.4 percentage while Davenport had about 95 per cent.

Columbia Flow Halted as Rocks Shoved into Water

Women Battle Over Novelist's Estate

Los Angeles — (U.P.) — Two women today battled over the $272,237 estate of the late James Hilton, British novelist and author of "Lost Horizon."

Mrs. Hilton testified that she was Hilton's legal widow and entitled to half of the estate outright as her community property share. Mrs. Hill, through attorney Samuel Reisman, claimed that Mrs. Hilton has no right to half the estate because Hilton obtained a Mexican divorce from her in 1937.
