

Eisenhower Promises to Press For Approval of School Program

Tacoma, Wash.—(U.P.)—President Eisenhower promised today he will press for congressional approval early next year of his $4,000,000,000 school construction program.

In a speech prepared for delivery at the College of Puget Sound, Mr. Eisenhower said he will ask that the school construction program be carried out in four years, instead of the five he originally set.

The program was blocked in Congress this year after the racial segregation issue was tied in with it. Democrats and Republicans have blamed each other for the failure of Congress to pass it.

Mr. Eisenhower said next year he will support his school construction program "with all the force at my command . . . for I hold this action to be essential to the welfare of the republic."

Wednesday night the President stepped up his attack on Adlai E. Stevenson. He charged the Democratic presidential nominee had based his campaign on the "half-truth" and twisted "hit and run" statements.

Lashes Out At Stevenson

In a speech to a crowd of about 13,000 at Seattle, Mr. Eisenhower also lashed back at Stevenson on the issue of stopping H-bomb tests.

He said that his administration consistently has "asked only that we have safeguards that we can trust, as well as others can trust, so that this path of peace toward universal disarmament can be travelled by all." Peaceful uses of the atom are the main objective of his administration, Mr. Eisenhower said.

"We simply refuse to do it all alone," he said. "Until others do it with us, we are going to stay strong."

In an assault on Stevenson's campaign tactics, the President also accused his Democratic opponent of dealing in "the big straddle" and "the old-fashioned double standard—otherwise known as the rubber yardstick."

Administration Plans Another Step in Reaching Decision on Israel Loan

Washington—(U.P.)—The administration is about to take another step toward reaching a final decision on Israel's bid for a $75 million American loan.

Israel is seeking the money to help finance various irrigation and agricultural projects.

Administration officials said today that a three-man mission from the export-import bank will leave for Israel within a week to 10 days to make an on-the-spot check of irrigation projects already under development.

Indications are that a final decision on the loan will not be possible before the Nov. 6 election. Some Republican politicians had hoped for action before that date.

New York Attorney General

Jacob Javits, Republican candidate for the Senate from New York, recently urged quick administration action on the Israeli project.

Stressed Importance

Javits stressed the importance of the loan during an Oct. 2 conference with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. Javits said after the meeting that he had won Dulles' assurances "he would give the matter his personal attention."

President Eisenhower may be able to give a report on the loan's status when he speaks in Madison Square Garden Oct. 25.

But officials denied reports that there are plans for Dulles to make a pre-election announcement of the loan's approval. There had been reports that such an announcement would be made to counter Jewish wrath over U.S. inaction on Israel's appeal for defensive arms from this country.

No Information

Vice President Richard M. Nixon was asked on a nationwide television program Wednesday night whether such reports were true. He replied that he had no information on the question.

Export-import bank officials stressed that the loan would not be approved or disapproved finally by that agency until the three-man mission has reported back, probably sometime in November.

The fact that the mission is being sent is regarded as a good sign in diplomatic and financial circles. But bank officials indicated the loan would be considered very carefully, particularly in the light of Israel's previous loans from the bank totaling $135,000,000. This total has been cut to $119,000,000 at the present time by principal payments.

Director of the Talent, Medford, Rogue River Valley, Eagle Point and Gold Hill irrigation districts must be filed in district offices not later than midnight Oct. 29, or 15 days before the election on Nov. 13.

Directors whose terms expire this year include Paul Culbertson, Medford Irrigation district; E. M. Bigham, Eagle Point Irrigation district; Lester Parker, Gold Hill Irrigation district; Otto Bohnert, Rogue River Valley Irrigation district; and Homer Moore and E. E. Rasmussen, Talent Irrigation district.

Rasmussen was appointed director of the TID in September when Henry Owens resigned. He was appointed to serve as director until the next election. Owens resigned when he moved out of the district.

No petitions for director have yet been mailed in any of the district offices. An election will be held Nov. 13 in irrigation districts where more than one petition is filed for director.

Physicians Cautioned Against Patients

Portland—(U.P.)—Oregon physicians were cautioned yesterday against being unduly influenced by their patients.

Dr. Leo H. Bartemeier of Baltimore told members of the Oregon State Medical Society that medical writers have stressed that the attitude of the physician may hasten, delay or even prevent the patient's recovery. Less recognized, he said, was the fact that every physician is influenced in various ways by his patients and their friends.

He told the Oregon doctors that "parents and physicians should be capable of manifesting an optimum amount of firmness toward the persons entrusted to their care."

Suit For $117,000 Filed Against Union

Portland—(U.P.)—Suit for $117,000 damages against the International Electrical Workers Union and certain of its officers was filed in Federal District Court here yesterday by Burt Landon, for 10 years business manager of Salem Local 280 of the Union.

Landon charged in his complaint that he was illegally discharged as business manager and that he has been damaged not only as an official of his union but he has been prevented as well from getting a job as an electrical worker.

Landon said the International officers claimed he had signed an illegal agreement involving check off of dues. He said the International took over the local for a time and that he had been trying since Jan. 19 to get a hearing on the charges.

DOUG McKAY has a sound positive program to help OREGON SCHOOLS

Hear this informative panel discussion

- ★ DR. MORGAN S. ODELL, President Lewis and Clark College
- ★ MR. PHIL HITCHCOCK, Outstanding Educator and State Leader
- ★ BELVA JUNE MAYOR, Portland School Teacher

Doug McKay has always been active in bettering education for the children of Oregon. At the time he was Governor, both the Basic School Fund Increase and the Holy Report on Education became a reality. Education received its biggest boost in a generation with the largest capital expenditures for higher education in the state's history. McKay urges federal help for school construction, but insists on local control because he firmly believes that Oregon people know Oregon problems best.

Facts on Nitrogen Fertilizing

Retention in Soil

NH₃ (anhydrous ammonia) gives plants nitrogen in a form they can use immediately and maintains a supply of plant nourishment throughout the growing season. Applied at least 6" deep in the soil—where the temperature is cool—the ammonia is fully retained by soil particles and is highly resistant to leaching.

Scientific applications make sure Shell NH₃ is always placed 6" or more below the soil surface. Crop nourishment remains on tap all growing season. That's one reason why Shell NH₃ Service is your sure way to fertilize.

Benson Defends Ike Administration

Modesto, Calif.—(U.P.)—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson defended the Eisenhower administration as representative of "all the people" and claimed the decline in farm prices which started in 1947 has been checked.

Benson made the statement Wednesday night at a $25 per plate Republican fund raising dinner attended by 700 people. He left by plane today for Boise, Idaho.

"Although the administration is accused of having forgotten the farmer," Benson declared, "It has adopted programs that will reverse the drift toward a socialized, tightly regulated type of agriculture."
