Yankee Editor Views Segregation In Mississippi With Mixed Emotion

Editor's Note: Nineteen New England newspapermen visited Mississippi last week to view "the true picture" there and report on it. The trip was sponsored by the State Sovereignty Commission, an organization dedicated to preserving Mississippi's segregated way of life. This account of the visit was written by the publisher of the Milford N. H. Cabinet and Wilton Journal.

By WILLIAM B. ROTCH
Written For United Press
Segregation of the races may be an established way of life in the Deep South when a New Hampshire Yankee sees it for the first time the impact is rough and disturbing.

After only eight days in Mississippi it would be unfair to pass judgment on the state or its customs. At the same time it is impossible to return from such a trip without vivid impressions.

Contrary to a general impression the trip was never described to us as an opportunity to study segregation. Rather it was an offer to show the "true picture" of Mississippi, to allow a group of grass-roots newsmen a glimpse of a fast-growing section of the country, its accomplishments and its problems. The result was a week of sight-seeing and of serious discussions with business leaders and officials in widely separated parts of the state.

No summary of the trip should be limited to a discussion of the race issue, yet no summary should ignore it. Segregation became a sort of undertone of the entire trip. It crept into every conversation. It always seemed to smoulder close to the surface. Some people can ignore an issue of this sort. To me it was sickening and depressing.

Trip Marred
Only the race issue marred the trip. It was always there, always cropping out in little snatches of conversation.

Mississippi has no Negro problem we were told; it is the Northern magazines and agitators who stir up trouble. The Negro is content. He prefers separate facilities. White men pay the taxes so the Negro can benefit from the new schools. If only people from the North would leave Mississippi alone to work out its problems to the satisfaction of both races.

We heard that so many times and we almost believed it until some of us began slipping away from dinners and receptions and talking with small groups of intense Negroes, tragically eager to talk to someone who would listen.

This is not the place to document those stories. Many of them we had no opportunity to check. But to me they seemed sincere, and they added up to a picture of indignity, of "second-rate citizenship." Perhaps it was the contrasts that got me down.

To sip cocktails with a lady radiating Southern culture while she related her daughter's latest doggerel: "See you later, integrator; little white, chocolate child." To eat dinner with the publisher of the local paper and have him explain that he never had and never would publish a picture of a Negro, not Roy Campanella or Marian Anderson, because "we mustn't let down the bars." And an hour later to be seated in a bare office, surrounded by deeply serious Negroes appealing for the chance to be treated like men, to be given the privilege of voting and equal treatment before the law, asking that their children not be brought up to feel inferior. They cited example after example to prove their points.

Dusty Road Ahead

We asked one colored boy what he saw when he looked into the future. He replied, slowly and solemnly: "I see a long, dry, dusty road ahead."

That is strong medicine to feed a Yankee. The fact that there are islands of progress and hope does not obscure the islands of despair which to me seem to violate every principle of Christianity and Democracy.

It is the South's problem, but at stake in this struggle is human dignity. If that is lost, I wonder at the value of the other things we were shown in Mississippi.

Perhaps it is ironic that I should feel this way after being entertained by an organization dedicated to preserving Mississippi's segregated way of life. These are impressions. I may be mistaken.

But so many Negroes, speaking privately, said: "Remember, it is our tax money, too, which is bringing you down here. If you go home and write that the Negro is happy in Mississippi you will have let down the colored man in his struggle for dignity."

A New Hampshire Yankee can only view the situation with mixed and disturbed emotions.

discuss vital issues of this historic campaign

EQUALIZING THE TAX BURDEN

- Wayne Morse believes the tax burden should be shifted away from middle and low income families.
- Morse opposed the 1954 GOP tax bill which gave far greater benefits to corporation stockholders than to wage-earners.
- Senator Morse fought for an increase in individual exemptions from $600 to $700 in 1954.
- Morse's program will keep our economy strong by "beefing up" mass consumer purchasing power.

"Why Democrats are voting for DOUG McKAY"

"I believe in the constitutional concepts of the Democratic party as outlined at our Chicago convention. But Wayne Morse with his empty promises to farmers, veterans, and selfish pressure groups has gone far beyond our party platform. We Democrats intend to keep our promises—and therefore cannot support the one-man party promises of Wayne Morse."

Here is what Morse said about the Democrat Party
"The Democratic party is bankrupt for leadership and the administration is honeycombed with corruption and malfeasance in office."—Sen. Morse in the San Francisco Chronicle, Dec. 12, 1951.

Mark Hatfield KNOWS HOW To Provide Good Government

Seldom do you find a candidate who is actually trained for service in government. Mark Hatfield is such a man. He has more experience for the job than any candidate for the office. He has spent years in the study and instruction of political science and he has six years of outstanding service in the legislature as well. Senator Hatfield understands, from first-hand knowledge, the function of institutions and state institutions are a direct responsibility of the Secretary of State.

The Oregon Statesman, Oct. 11, 1956, said this of Mark Hatfield: "Hatfield brings knowledge of government"

"His election will not only insure a diligent administration of the secretary of state's office and careful attention to the work of the Board of Control but it will confirm this able young man in the career of public service to which he dedicates himself. The Statesman cordially recommends the election of Mark Hatfield for Secretary of State."
