Fiddle Whittling Interesting Hobby

Milroy, Okla. — (U.P.) — Almost any small town boy can whittle a miniature fiddle from an old cigar box and a piece of wood and M. A. Carroll has turned that sort of pastime into an interesting hobby.

Using whatever kind of wood happens to be at hand, and ice picks, kitchen knives and tweezers for tools, Carroll has carved a collection of most unusual musical instruments. He said he has found the hobby relaxing, inexpensive and satisfying.

One of his first violins was made from a gourd. His present collection ranges from a tiny instrument, one-inch long, to those containing 325 pieces of wood.

He has no process for seasoning the wood. He fashioned one beautiful cherry violin from a scrap of wood he found in a farm pond. Another instrument is made of hickory bark.

One of his prize possessions is a tiny violin carved from wood which Carroll says came from a desk belonging to Abraham Lincoln.

To complete his collection, Carroll said he would like to have a violin made from a piece of wood from every state in the union.

Arab World Said Brought Closer Against France

Cairo — (U.P.) — Arab quarters said today Sunday's North Africa-wide demonstrations and strikes against the French government had solidified the 100-million strong Arab world against France.

A general strike throughout the Arab nations, riots in which Arabs burned the French consulate in Old Jerusalem, and other actions against France were called in protest against the arrest by France of five Algerian Nationalist leaders.

The actions whetted demands by Arab states that all of their sever political and economic relations with France. They also set in motion a financial aid program to help "liberate" Algeria from French rule.

King Saud of Saudi Arabia opened the contributions to this cause by donating $300,000. The Arab League Council, currently meeting in Cairo, heard proposals that the Arab states break off relations with France. Emir Abdel Krim, legendary leader of the Moroccan Riff war against the French, urged Moroccans and Tunisians to join forces with the Algerians in a unified campaign to throw the French out of North Africa.

Attacks Redoubled
Already Tunisian and Moroccan troops whose troops have been more or less tied down in Algeria. At the same time the Algerians have redoubled their attacks in demonstration of anger against the arrest of the five leaders.

Primitive Papers Slated for Study

Madison, Wis. — (U.P.) — A Swedish scholar visiting the University of Wisconsin this fall believes his investigations of the first European newspapers will make history "come alive" for his students.

Folke Dahl, curator of the city and university library of Gothenburg, Sweden, has brought a unique collection of primitive newspapers with him, including some of the famous "corantos" in Europe in the 17th Century and are the ancestors of present newspapers.

Dahl believes the study of the corantos has been seriously neglected by scholars.

"You can't shake the hand of a king who died 300 years ago but you can handle a newspaper printed 300 years ago," he said, in pointing out the value of early newspapers in making history "real" for the student.

An early Dutch coranto in his collection mentions the arrival of the Dutch painter Rubens in Holland in 1629 with credentials as a diplomatic representative of Spain.

This was the first mention of any great painter in the press that Dahl has discovered.

Many things that newspapermen associate with modern times originated in the earliest newspapers. For instance, according to Dahl, early editors "stopped the presses" when a big news item came in after the first editions were printed. The latest news was then inserted, bullet-fashion, in small type.

"These early newspapers were very important in forming public opinion and in disseminating information," Dahl said. "Kings, cardinals, and even town councils became very interested in bringing them under their control."

One-Man Police Car Improves Protection

Chicago — (U.P.) — Cities may find the one-man police car a partial solution at least to the problem of improving police protection despite manpower and money shortages.

This is the conclusion by the St. Louis Governmental Research Institute after a study of one-man car patrols in 15 cities of more than 400,000 population. The findings were summarized in Public Management, monthly magazine of the International City Managers' Association.

The study prompted St. Louis to begin using one-man police cars on a small scale about a year ago. The new policy has met the approval of both the police force and citizens generally.

Other cities using one-man cars regularly include New York, Los Angeles, Baltimore, Cleveland, San Francisco, Milwaukee, Houston, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Seattle, Kansas City, Mo., San Diego, Dallas, Denver and San Antonio.

In all, about 200 U. S. cities of more than 10,000 population rely on one-man patrols exclusively. Most of these cities are in the 10,000 to 50,000 population bracket.
